France May Turn Again To Reynaud For Premier

Independent Sees Ramadier; Moves To Form Cabinet If Latter Falls

Paris, Nov. 16 (AP).—Paul Reynaud took steps tonight toward forming a new French cabinet to succeed the troubled government of Socialist Premier Paul Ramadier, an authoritative informant said.

Following a conversation with the Premier, Reynaud said he now felt he could negotiate with various political groups.

Reynaud, the head of the Third Republic's last government, said an "important change" would be made in France's economic policy if he undertook to head a new cabinet as Premier. He is considered an expert on government finance.

Asked if he would have other contacts with the Premier, Reynaud replied, "There is nothing definite."

Ramadier Confers with Leaders

The rising threat of Communist violence on the left and opposition of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Rally of the French People (RPF) on the right have spurred Ramadier in efforts to strengthen his middle-of-the-road government.

Ramadier has been attempting to form a "third force" of Socialists, Popular Republicans, Radical Socialists and Independents to combat both the Communists and De Gaulle's followers. Over the weekend he conferred with a number of political leaders.

His followers said he had hoped to be able to announce a strengthened and broadened cabinet, which might even have a new premier, before the National Assembly begins debate Tuesday on the recent disorders in Marseille.

It was reported without confirmation that Reynaud, as an independent, would have the support of the Socialist Party in his efforts to form a new cabinet.

Favored Fusion With Britain

With such support, it was said, Reynaud should be able to form a government embracing almost all the national assembly, except for the Communists and the small group of deputies pledged to De Gaulle's Rally. The Rally thus far has not had a chance to test its strength in a general election.

Because of his rightist leanings,

Mob Attacks Furtwaengler

German Conductor Escapes in Vienna

Vienna, Austria, Nov. 16 (U.P.)—Dr. Wilhelm Furtwaengler, German conductor, barely escaped injury today at the hands of an organized mob which waylaid him as he appeared at the Vienna Music Hall to conduct a concert.

A Russian sentry from nearby Soviet headquarters at the Imperial Hotel fired in the air to break up the mob, estimated at 50 persons, allegedly members of the Austrian Political Persecutees Association, composed of former concentration camp internees.

The riot squad was called, but arrived after Furtwaengler had entered the hall followed by boos and cries of "go back to Germany."

Baron Eugen Meyer, 65-year-old director of the music hall, rushed to Furtwaengler's rescue. Meyer was punched in the head several times and during the confusion, Furtwaengler slipped inside.

The mob poured into the hall just as the orchestra was to begin playing "Metamorphose" by Paul Hindemith. This opera was banned in Germany during Hitler's regime.

The mob began hissing and heckling, preventing the start of the performance. The riot squad arrived and began weeding out demonstrators.

The former conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra made his postwar debut in Austria in 1946 under Soviet sponsorship. He subsequently was flown to Berlin in a Soviet military plane, to initiate proceedings which led to his recent denazification by a German court.

4 Book-Author Speakers Listed

Edward Steichen, photographer, former Navy captain and author of "The Blue Ghost," a pictorial drama of the aircraft carrier, the USS Lexington, on which he served in the war, will be one of four guest author-speakers at The Washington Post's Book and Author luncheon at the Statler Hotel at 1 p. m. November 25.

Others on the program include James Ramsey Ullman, whose book, "The White Tower," was a book club selection and whose current work, "Kingdom of Adventure: Everest," tells of the excitement of mountain climbing; Corrine, Griffith, former star of the silent screen and author of "My Life With the Redskins," and Edith Sulkin, whose postwar travels in Europe resulted in her "Continent in Limbo."

Luncheon tickets, at $3, are now on sale in book stores.

De Gasperi Adds Police As Communists Step Up Fight on Marshall Plan

Rome, Nov. 16 (U.P.)—Rioters carrying red flags today wrecked the headquarters of three rightist political parties in a south Italian town as the Communists' bloody offensive against the Italian government and the Marshall Plan went into its 12th day.

The national government of Christian Democratic Premier Alcide de Gasperi and local governments in all big Italian cities increased police forces and made arrangements to call out the army if necessary to maintain order.

The Communists made their stand clear in an angry 5000-word manifesto calling for "fighting unity . . . to overthrow the government" for its "criminal action" in "reducing Italy to slavery" and making the country a "vassal" of the United States through the Marshall aid plan.

Called Help to Marshall

An authoritative U. S. diplomat in Rome commented that "so far, it looks as if (Communist boss) Palmiro Togliatti is working for George Marshall." He said that Communist demonstrations in some 125 Italian cities and towns had strengthened Marshall's campaign to obtain interim aid for Europe from the U. S. Congress.

Togliatti defended the 12-day wave of bloody political violence in a speech tonight, declaring that it was the only answer to the "rebirth of fascism" and demanding the overthrow of the government to "save peace."

The Communist general secretary spoke at a closed session of the Communist Party in Milan. His political ally, left-wing Socialist Pietro Nenni, expressed similar sentiments at a public rally near the north Italian port of Leghorn.

D. C. Mother Takes Off for London Party

By Lois Guerrieri

(Copyright, 1947, By The Washington Post)

LaGuardia Field, N. Y., Nov. 16. Biggest thrill yet came at noon today when I boarded the big, shiny, red-trimmed Trans-World Airline Constellation, Star of Dublin.

At 12:35 we are scheduled to take off for New Foundland. I wonder when I get above New York if it will look anything like it did last night. (Editor's note: The Star of Dublin took off for Gander, New Foundland, at 12:38 p. m. Sunday; landed at 4:11 p. m. at Stephenville and departed 7:15 p. m. after refueling.)

At least I have neighbors aboard. The captain of the airplane is Virgil Elliott of 3429 Valley dr., Alexandria, Va.; the purser is C. E. Smith of 5720 N. Washington blvd., Arlington, Va., and the flight radio man is Dale Barricklow of 1732 Abingdon dr., Alexandria.

There'll be more thrills to tell at the end of this—my first big plane ride—and certainly my longest trip away from home.

We were at LaGuardia Field before 8:15 this morning, making final arrangements on tickets. I found—and took advantage of the

794 on Second Ship Intercepted, Sent To Cyprus Camps

Jerusalem, Nov. 16 (AP).—One hundred and eighty-five unauthorized Jewish immigrants foiled the British blockade today by beaching their tiny vessel and wading ashore in northern Paletsine while 794 Jews aboard a second ship were intercepted and sent to Cyprus detention camps.

The 50-ton motor launch Aliyah (immigration) was driven aground by her crew in the early morning darkness near Nahariya as British naval patrols halted the second ship.

No one was found aboard when the Aliyah was discovered on the beach of a fashionable resort area a few miles south of the Lebanese-Palestine border. The passengers and crew apparently had scattered into the hills.

The second ship, the 250-ton auxiliary schooner Raphael Lucia which the immigrants renamed the Kadimah (Forward), had left a French port with the Aliyah on November 3.

After being boarded by the British in Palestine waters, the Kadimah sailed to Haifa under her own power. There 781 of the immigrants, including 246 women and 121 children, were transferred to

More Light On Meyers' Deals Due

Probers Shut Books On Hughes Without Reply to His Parting Shot About Liars

By The Associated Press

A Senate War Investigation Subcommittee closed its books on Howard Hughes yesterday and promised new evidence of dealings between Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers and other aircraft firms.

The committee made no direct reply to Hughes' parting shot that "the public was kept in the dark" during at least a portion of its inquiry into his wartime plane contracts.

Any such reply and any conclusion as to irregularity in the negotiation of the 40 million dollars in contracts which Hughes held must await a report, probably months hence, by the group headed by Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.).

His subcommittee will resume today its investigation into the relations of Meyers, retired Air Force deputy procurement chief, with other firms whose contracts he had a hand in negotiating. It has dug deeply into Meyers-Hughes relations.

Broken Off for 12 Weeks

The Ferguson group wound up its inquiry into the Hughes contracts yesterday, the twenty-first day of the hearings. They were broken off for about 12 weeks between August 11 and November 5.

The California movie producer and planemaker, the central figure of many a stormy set-to with the committee, got in the last word.

He recalled that twice during the hearings he disagreed "diametrically" with other witnesses and "the public was left to decide whom to believe." Hughes continued:

"At the very time when General Meyers and I were testifying here, you had locked up in your files downstairs all sort of evidence which would have shown very clearly who was telling the truth.

Evidence Ample, He Says

"You had ample evidence concerning General Meyers' relations with other aircraft companies which would have made it clear that I was telling the truth when I described his relations with me."

"I see no reason why the public was kept in the dark."

Ferguson, agreeing with Hughes that the committee has evidence not yet disclosed about Meyers, said that it is unable to present everything in one day, that some testimony must come first.

When Hughes said the public twice had to choose between him and someone else, he referred to:

1. His statement that Meyers tried to solicit a $200,000 loan from him while the general was negotiating an Air Force plane contract with the Hughes company. Meyers denied this, saying Hughes tried to induce him to accept a loan of $250,000.

2. Hughes' statement last August that Senator Brewster (R., Me.), as chairman of the full committee, tried to make a deal to call off the hearings in exchange for an airline merger. Brewster categorically denied making any such offer.

That phase of the inquiry was officially closed last August and Hughes made only a passing ref-

Truman to Take Aid And Price Program To Congress Today

To Ask 600 Millions Of Stopgap Help to Europe in Address To Joint Session

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman today will hand Congress the difficult assignment of providing 600 million dollars of emergency help to Europe while curbing inflation at home.

His program for holding down the high cost of living will be conciliatory in general, but with a reserve of more stringent measures to be applied if necessary. Its details were ironed out yesterday at a lengthy conference with Cabinet members and economic advisers.

Though the President is expected to ask nothing more drastic for immediate application than allocation at the source of scarce materials, return of credit and rent controls and extension of export restrictions, rationing and price control will be in the background. It was expected he would surround his proposal for these measures with limitations as to "necessity" and his own authority in applying them, thus avoiding "blank check" charges.

No suggestion of a new special organization resembling OPA was expected, although there were reports that establishment of an interim agency to plan for return of controls might be recommended.

To Appear Personally

When he launches the special session by personally addressing the House and Senate in the House chamber at 1:30 p. m., Mr. Truman will ask that first consideration be given measures for foreign aid. Republican leaders already have assured him they will take up stopgap relief first, and have taken steps to expedite action to that end.

"The message," said White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross yesterday, "will be from 4000 to 5000 words long and will take about 30 minutes to deliver."

Closeted with the President yesterday were Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, Attorney General Clark, Commerce Secretary Harriman, Presidential Adviser John R. Steelman, Presidential Counsel Clark M. Clifford, Undersecretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman and Richard Field, Harvard economics professor on temporary duty with Harriman.

Congress will enter consideration of relief to Western Europe with ample evidence at hand of the gravity of its task. Committees which it dispatched last summer to study all phases of the matter have returned and have been practically

Asks Truman Indicate Favor

Stassen Urges 3-Billion Tax Cut In '48, Plus Aid and Debt Trim

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Denver, Nov. 16.—Harold E. Stassen today proposed a three-billion-dollar cut in taxes in 1948. He said such a cut would not interfere with the Marshall Plan or reduction of the national debt.

He urged President Truman to indicate to Congress that he would approve a tax reduction of such proportions after passage of the European aid program.

The 40-year-old former Minnesota Governor, a candidate for the Republican nomination for President, issued his Sabbath-day statement on the eve of Mr. Truman's appearance before a special session of Congress. He then took off from Denver on a flight to Amarillo, Tex., to continue his hunt for GOP delegates.

"There is considerable talk," said Stassen, "that if we aid Europe we cannot cut taxes, or that if we cut taxes we cannot aid Europe. These statements are absolutely incorrect.

"At the present high rate of production and of business activity and of income in America, which is certain to continue if we challenge our whole economic system with a program of extensive aid to Europe, our present tax structure would yield 45 billion dollars of income to the Government in 1948.

"This estimate is due not only to the large income but also to the fact that tax deductions for old losses or for depreciations have been almost completely filled in and a greater portion of income is now available for taxation.

"On the spending side 5 billion dollars for interest on our debt, 11 billions for the armed forces, 8 billions for all types of veterans aid and assistance, 3 billions to pay off on the debt itself, 6 billions for our program of world reconstruction and aid, 7 billions for all other functions of the Government—this is an adequate sound budget.

"We therefore can meet each of these items, make a three-billion-dollar cut in taxes, particularly in the excess wartime level for income taxes, and some special cut for small business taxes, and still have a balanced budget with one or two billion dollars of reserve.

"I strongly urge upon the President that he clarify this issue by

FTC Broadens Move Against Steel Institute

Amended Complaint Says West Coast Policy Is Unfair

By The Associated Press

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday that it has broadened its steel price-fixing complaint to include statements that the steel industry has forestalled increases in production facilities and that its selling methods discriminate against the West Coast.

In general, the amended complain is similar to the one issued last August. But, in addition to the new items, it differs in these respects:

1. The original complaint named the American Iron & Steel Institute, New York, and 26 corporations as representatives of the entire membership. The new complaint names the institute and 101 steel producers.

Lynn C. Paulson, FTC attorney, said not all 101 companies named are members of the institute. As an example, he said, some subsidiaries of the larger companies named are not members.

2. The original complaint was directed against producers of steel and iron. The new complaint is restricted to steel.

Paulson said the iron angle was dropped because "the commission after further study, found that the situation regarding iron is not the same as that regarding steel." He declined to say whether the commission is considering bringing separate action against iron producers.

3. It was estimated that the companies named in the original complaint account for about 80 per cent of the Nation's total steel ingot-producing capacity. Those named in the new complaint, according to Paulson, would account

Golden Rule Plea

Systematize Charity Aid, Truman Asks

By the United Press

President Truman yesterday implored American to give generously and more systematically to their religious and charitable institutions.

"We cannot hope to be worthy of the continued blessings of Providence if our prosperity is used selfishly for our own personal gratification," he said in a message to the National Stewardship Conference.

The three-day conference, which opened yesterday, is sponsored by the Golden Rule Foundation. Representatives of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, the (Protestant) Church World Service and the United Jewish Appeal met to consider what they described as a "serious" falling-off in individual contributions to welfare and religious work.

In a preconference statement, the organization said that religious and charitable contributions are even lower than in the darkest days of the depression. Mr. Truman emphasized this.

He pointed out that the national income today is four times as great as in the depression year of 1942. But he said the percentage of it being given to church work has dropped from 5.6 per cent in 1932 to 1.6 per cent "during this time of our highest prosperity."

The President acknowledged that taxes are taking a much larger portion of the national income than formerly. He said the "exigencies of these war years" have obliged the Government to ask "not only for the biblical tithe but for two, three or more tithes."

But he said that some 40 million wage earners now have "an advantage in the ease of payment through withholding tax provisions."

"If these same 40 million wage

Atom-Ore Corner U. S. Aim, London Paper Charges

London, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Daily Express said tonight in a page-one story that the United States is "paying up to 365 pounds ($1460) a ton for unranium ore it does not need," trying thereby "to corner the bulk of the world's atom bomb metals."

"The United States Government bought more than 10,000 tons of atomic metal ore last year; less than 10 per cent of it could be used in bomb production and power experiments," Chapman Pincher, the Express science editor wrote.

The Express, which is owned by Lord Beaverbrook, said the main American sources of unranium were Katanga in the Belgian Congo, Great Bear Lake in Canada and its own mines in Colorado. In addition, Pincher wrote, the United States was supplied from "important" thorium workings in Brazil which recently came under American control.

The Washington Post Poll

(Individual Expressions of Opinion, Page 10)

In the battle of the styles the hemline is inching down a little, despite the fairly widespread hostility to the new fashions, The Washington Post Poll shows. Only about 3 out of 10 women in Washington like them, and even fewer men—one out of every six—look upon them with an approving eye.

But half the women either have already lengthened some of last year's skirts, or intend to do so. Women with higher incomes are in general giving in more readily to the new fashion than those with lower incomes. Nearly 6 out of 10 of those in families with annual incomes under $3000 have resisted lengthening last year's clothes, as compared with 4 out of 10 in families with incomes of $5000 or more.

Hems have not come down a great deal, however. Half the women in Greater Washington intend to wear their skirts "a little below the knee" this winter, while a group nearly as large intend to wear theirs at "mid-calf" length. Only a small minority intends to be more extreme.

These findings of The Washington Post Poll are based on personal interviews with a representative cross-section of people living in Greater Washington.

Style Questions Asked

Local residents were first asked: "What do you think about the new women's fashions?"

	All Respondents	Men	Women
Like	22%	15%	28%
Dislike	56	63	50
Mixed	13	8	17
No answer
Don't know	9	14	5

Those who approve of the new styles mention most often that they like the longer lengths. Some think they are more flattering or more feminine-looking, while others like them as long as they are not "too extreme."

The length of the new skirts also accounts for more of the unfavorable reaction than any other features. Next in importance to the men is the espense involved, the cost of the new clothes, the expense of replacing old ones, while some consider it an attempt on the part of the clothing manufacturers to create an artificial demand.

How Women React

The women who dislike the new styles are more concerned with their appearance, and comment on the unbecoming or unflattering nature of the new clothes more often than they mention the expense involved. Other reasons mentioned by fewer people are that the new clothes are too wasteful of material, and are a step backward to outdated styles, while some dislike the way in which women have their styles dictated to them.

The men who are most likely to have to spend money for new clothes for their wives are most opposed to them. Seventy per cent of the men with annual incomes over $3000 object to the new styles, while only 44 per cent of those with incomes under $3000 do so.

The income of women makes no difference in their attitude toward the fashions. It does, however,

Royalty Arriving in London

King's Horses and King's Men Rehearse Wedding Procession

London, Nov. 16 (AP).—The King's horses and the King's men held a rehearsal today for the procession that will carry Princess Elizabeth Thursday from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abby and to marriage.

White horses, escorted by guardsmen in resplendent uniforms, took the prescribed 12 minutes to pull along the route a coach representing the one to be used by the Princess on her way to wed Lieut. Philip Mountbatten.

The Princess was not in evidence, although Buckingham Palace said she had returned from the country and made two trips today to St. James' Palace to view the wedding presents, being arranged for public display. The King and Queen took a look, too, in the afternoon.

Thousands of Londoners lined the procession route.

Preceding the coach moved four small wagons, representing royal carriages. They were accompanied by the sovereign's mounted escort of seven officers and 210 men in full ceremonial dress, with white and red plumes on gleaming helmets. Upraised swords shone against red or blue cloaks.

Mountbatten drove to London from his Wiltshire naval training station, to join Elizabeth in receiving visiting royalty. He will get both a bride and a pay increase Thursday. Under naval regulations his weekly pay is increased from $33.60 to $51.10 when he marries. Elizabeth's yearly allowance, equivalent to $60,000, also is expected to be boosted by Parliament.

Mountbatten and his princess will hold an afternoon party at St. James' Palace tomorrow for several hundred persons, including many "plain people" who have ingratiated themselves to either Elizabeth or Philip. A similar party Tuesday will include James Black, Scottish barber who trimmed Philip's hair when he was a schoolboy at Gordonstoun.

The convening of European royalty continued. Queen Fredericka of Greece and former King Peter of Yugoslavia arrived. Also here were Denmark's and Romania's Kings, Princess Juliana of the Netherlands, Princess Charles of Belgium and Don Juan, the Spanish pretender.

Royal contingents from Norway and Sweden are due tomorrow.

Expectant Mother, 16, Escapes Injury in Stork Race Collision

A 16-year-old expectant mother narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday, when a District Health Department ambulance, rushing her to Gallinger Hospital for the delivery of her child, collided with an auto at 15th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

The victim, Gladys Hill, of 909 27th st. nw., gave birth to a baby girl several hours later at Gallingher. Her condition was described as good. Hospital authorities said the child apparently suffered no ill effects from the collision but was declared to be in critical condition because of its small size.

Driver of the ambulance was Joseph F. St. Peter, 33, of 3314 Ames st. ne. He forfeited $10 collateral on a charge of failing to yield the right of way. The auto was operated by Robert J. Morton, 21, of Avoca, Pa. His sister, Helen Conant, 36, of West Pittston, Pa., was treated at Emergency Hospital for bruises to her legs and arms.

David Walsh, 57, of 3823 13th st. nw., was admitted to Emergency Hospital in undetermined condition with a possible skull fracture and possible fractured ribs. Police said he was struck at New Hampshire ave. and Randolph st. nw. about 1 a. m. yesterday by an auto operated by Joseph R. Brewer, 22, of 4520 4th st. nw.

Inquests Into 2 Traffic Deaths Scheduled Today

7 Taken in Death Of Siamese Ruler

Face Problem

Members Of Congress Seek Homes

If facing personal problems is any aid to resolving national and international issues, more than a few members of Congress should be well prepared for today's opening session.

For many Senators and Representatives, recall to Washington for the special session meant a new plunge into the area's housing shortage.

Principal victims were Congressmen who rent homes or apartments from individuals just for the period of regular Congress sessions.

For those with school-age children there was an added scramble of last-minute decision. Leave the children in their home State or transfer them to schools here? Plan for a short special session, or prepare to stay here on through the regular session starting in January?

Fortunate ones like Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) had no special problems either way.

"We always come back to Washington in time for the children to enter school, and we have our regular apartment at the Westchester," said Mrs. Morse. "Besides," she added, "Wayne expected there would be a special session, and he made no plans which would conflict with it."

The Morses have three children, who attend public schools here, Nancy, 16; Judith, 13, and Amy, 11.

Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.) and his family, however, found they were unable to return to the house they formerly occupied on Woodland dr., but succeded in renting a home at 2222 Wyoming ave.

"We didn't get a house until practically the minute before we came," said Mrs. Saltonstall. "We moved into this one Saturday," she said. Their daughter, Susan, 17, attends the Madeira School.

Old-timers on the Washington scene, like Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.), had no planning difficulties.

"I've been living at the Mayflower for about 26 years now," he said, "and Washington is a second home. A special session is just part of the job."

Most members of Congress who were back in their home States returned here over the weekend—except those who had to start earlier to search for living quarters—to get a day or two of rest before the session opens.

None returned here so dramatically as Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho), who made his appearance at the Capitol yesterday afternoon astride a horse.

Housing posed no problems this year for Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.). "After six years of looking for a regular home," said Mrs. Rivers, "at last we have to look no longer."

They have been living at 401 Fontaine st., Alexandria, since January, and have three children, the youngest a boy six-weeks-old. Their only child of school age attends St. Agnes School.

Congressmen who sublet their apartments until January and cannot now regain them, might well take pointers from Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.). He sublet his apartment in the Dorchester House—but with the provision that he could get it back whenever he needed it.

"I just got back here Saturday night," said Representative Bates, "and the apartment was ready for me—without any inconvenience to anyone."

His son, Francis, 18, youngest of seven children, attends the Devitt School and boarded with friends since the start of the fall term, Representative Bates said.

New Regime Links Aide of Ex-Leader To King's 'Murder'

Bangkok, Siam, Nov. 16 (AP).—The new Siamese government today linked a secretary to the fugitive opposition leader Pridi Phanomyong with the assassination of King Ananda Mahidol, and said it had definite proof the youthful monarch was murdered.

Phanomyong, who led the pro-Allied underground movement in Siam during the war, was declared by reliable informants to be at his secret headquarters awaiting political developments. He is a former Premier.

The military regime which seized power in a bloodless coup last Sunday said it had arrested seven persons, including four women scullery workers in the royal palace, as participants in the shooting of Ananda Mahidol last June.

Suspect Disappears

Lieut. Gen. Phin Chunhawn, supreme commander of the Siamese army, said that Senior Lieut. Vajarachi Siddhivjev, a secretary to Phanomyong, was an eighth suspect in the assassination, but that he had disappeared.

Those arrested were Chaliew Tradunros, secretary to the late King, palace attendants Buth Talmasasarin and Chit Singhasena, and the four women.

The military placed guards at the airports and harbor to watch for Siddhivjev and any member of the "fugitive government" of Premier Thamrong Nawasawat, who was ousted a week ago in the coup led by Marshal Pibul Songgram. The marshal, wartime dictator-premier of Siam, has taken no government position. Nawasawat is in hiding.

Succeeded By Brother

Ananda Mahidol was succeeded by his 19-year-old brother, Phumphipon Alduldet, who is now living in Switzerland.

Chunhawn said yesterday that several persons had been arrested in a plot to overthrow the new regime in a counter-revolt. He declared the plotters' aim was to prevent the return of the King, and to displace the constitutional monarchy with a republic.

He said members of the wartime Free Thai movement, in which Phanomyong was a leader, were involved in the plot.

COLORFUL FINISH—Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho), talks to reporters and friends after riding his horse, Nugget, up the steps of the Capitol yesterday as the climax of a coast-to-coast journey via horse and trailer from Los Angeles, to dramatize the Senator's belief that "we can get along with Russia"

Senator Taylor Ends 'Ride For Peace'

Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) ended his coast-to-coast "ride for peace" shortly after 2 p. m. yesterday by riding up to the Capitol steps on his sorrel horse Nugget.

The trip to dramatize his belief that "we can get along with Russia" began at Seal Beach, just south of Los Angeles, October 26.

He developed his thesis that conduct of "the elder statesmen of the Nation, both in and out of Congress" has made "Russian-American relations more strained" in an address at the Department of Interior auditorium last night.

With White Sombraro

The Senator when he arrived was nattily clad in white sombraro, black and white checked shirt and high-heeled cowboy boots with "dude spurs" for which he apologized, saying he'd lost his own in a hotel room.

Accompanying him on a second sorrel horse was Joan Wod, 14, daughter of his secretary, Charles D. Wod.

She accompanied Senator Taylor on the last lap of the trip, which began at the gates of Mount Vernon at 9 a. m. yesterday.

Senator Taylor, 43, said he had intended to make the whole trip on horseback, but calling of the special session of Congress made it necessary to speed up the tour by driving much of the way, hauling the horses in a trailer.

Rode 275 Miles

He said he had ridden about 275 miles altogether.

"I rode 34 miles the first day just to show that I could," he said.

"At Phoenix, Ariz., the press announced that I had called off the trip because of saddle sores," the former professional singing cowboy said, "but I issued a denial. You don't get saddle sores if you know how to ride."

He admitted to some sore muscles, however.

He said he had made seven stops en route, speaking at various places.

"I told people what I thought and asked them im they approved, and about 90 per cent would rise in approval. Of course, I don't attract the same audiences as Senator Taft.

"When I spoke at Norrib, Neb., where the people are employed by the TVA, they stood up after some hesitation. Some one told me afterwards, 'You know we work for the Government and are being investigated.' The chairman told me I had a majority, however.

Speech at Oak Ridge

"When I spoke at Oak Ridge, I told them what had happened at Norris and said I'd excuse them from standing up. They laughed and applauded.

"With this witch hunt people are afraid to speak their minds."

Taylor said he couldn't understand "why we are so intent on feeding our enemies, and our own allies that just got through helping us, we won't give them anything.

Big 4 Negotiators in Berlin Make Few Gains, Clay Reports

Berlin, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Military Governor for Germany, reported today that Big Four negotiations in Berlin had made "no substantial progress" during the past month toward solution of their major problems.

The pessimism of Clay's semi-monthly report, published as the Big Four foreign ministers prepare to meet in London, November 25, echoed the tone of routine military government summaries of events in Germany recently submitted to Washington.

Clay sad the only agreement western representatives on the Allied Control Council had been able to reach with the council's Russian member concerned reciprocal payments for reparations—an agreement achieved only by temporary western surrender to Soviet demands.

On the bright side, Clay's report disclosed that new production records were being set almost daily in the Ruhr coal fields, following establishment of a food incentive program.

Clay also reported that crime in the United States occupation zone had declined.

The reparations agreement provides that Russia will deliver grain, synthetic gasoline, Diesel fuel, synthetic rubber and timber to the western zones in part payment for reparations.

The Potsdam agreement provides that the Soviet Union must repay in goods 60 per cent of the value of reparations received from the western occupation areas.

Russia had been willing to make the shipments, but had refused to agree to the western argument that the goods must come from outside Germany. The Soviet Union, apparently intending to forge eastern Germany to pay the western zones, argued that she could provide goods from any source.

Clay said the western Allies had agreed to accept goods from any source for the time being, but that the United States was still pressing for a Russian agreement to obtain the commodities outside Germany.

Commenting on the upsurge in Ruhr coal operations, Clay reported that production in November totaled more than 299,700 tons a day, compared to 280,000 tons in October.

It is generally admitted that the economic recovery of western Europe depends on Ruhr coal.

U. N. Adjournment Hinges on Jewish Solution

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Efforts to adjourn the United Nations Assembly by Thanksgiving hinged today on solution of the Palestine problem and possible agreements to sidetrack full debate on such controversial issues as the big power veto.

Australian Foreign Minister Herbert V. Evatt, chairman of the special 57-nation Committee on Palestine, has insisted that the Holy Land issue be settled at this Assembly session and there wa some concern among veary delegates that the problem might prolong the meeting.

The question of the veto is among the final items on the calendar of the Political Committee.

John Foster Dulles held a week-end conference with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko to lay down the United States position. The American delegate stressed that the United States was willing to give up the veto on peaceful settlement of disputes and admission of new members to the N. N. Russia has vetoed 22 times, 10 in blocking new members. France has vetoed twice and the other three not at all.

Dulles also suggested that the veto problem be left over for the newly created "Little Assembly" in keeping with Secretary of State Marshall's proposal for a year-long study of the question. Russia has announced a boycott of the Interim assembly, scheduled to begin meetings in January, but Dulles suggested consultations between the Security Council and the "Little Assembly" to overcome this difficulty.

The situation on Palestine was that a subcommittee still has to work out final details of enforcing the proposed partition of the Holy Land into independent Jewish and Arab nations. There has been no vote yet on partition, and the Arabs remained confident they could block it.

Of the Assembly's six main committees, the Economic, Social and Trusteeship groups have finished. The Legal Committee has nearly completed its work. Leaving only the Political, Budgetary and Special Palestine committees to clear their calendars.

The Political Committee is currently debating India's charges of discrimination against Indians in South Africa. The veto, the annual Security Council report, proposals for revision of the Italian peace treaty and rules governing admission of new members remain on its agenda.

The Assembly itself hopes to dispose of the Spanish case tomorrow by reaffirming its 1946 resolution calling for member governments to withdraw ambassadors and ministers from Madrid. Only Argentina failed to comply with the step directed against the Falangist regime of Generalissimo Franco.

Life Expectancy Of 100 Held at Hand

New York, Nov. 16 (INS).—The president of the American Medical Association predicted today that 100-year life expectancy is at hand.

Dr. Edward L. Bortz told a radio audience that a child born now can expect to live to be 100 if he's given proper care in infancy and youth and avails himself of present medical knowledge through his adult years.

Sforza Thanks U. S. For Aid Sent Italy

Friendship Train Idea Has Touched Hearts, He Says

Rome, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Italian Foreign Minister Count Carlo Sforza said tonight that the Friendship Train now touring the United States showed the world that "there are no frontiers for charity and human solidarity."

In a radio address to the United States, (over ABC) Sforza thanked the American people for all already sent to Italy. He said Italy's fight now was to conquer "freedom from want."

"We must tell you," the Foreign Minister said, "that the charming idea of the Friendship Train has particularly touched our hearts here in Italy."

He recalled the gifts to Italian children from American GI's and added, "the miracle may be repeated today on a much larger scale with the Friendship Train."

Friendship Train Adds' . . On Carloads in N. Y., Pa.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Friendship Train, now leading a three-pronged assault on Europe's hunger, today traveled through Ohio and Pennsylvania gathering additional carloads of food.

The train, whose cargo totals 138 cars of flour, grain, macaroni, dried beans and canned foods, was split into three sections yesterday. Two of the sections moved in to the flatlands of Ohio while the third probed the mountainous terrain of Pennsylvania.

A 28-car section arriving in Pittsburgh last night received five additional carloads of food for Europe's needy. The CIO-United Steelworkers Union and the western Pennsylvania brewing industry each contributed a carload of flour.

Mayor David L. Lawrence, who met the train in a drizzling rain, declared:

"These carloads of food are a token of the deep concern the people of Pittsburgh feel for those who are suffering in Europe as an aftermath of the war, a war in which we shared."

New Evidence Due on Meyers

rence to it, saying the mention of Brewster's name "around here seems to throw everybody into a tizzy."

In other developments as the committee tied together loose ends of the inquiry:

1. Neil McCarthy, a former Hughes Tool Co. vice president, said he is convinced Meyers tried to "shake down" Hughes for the loan and a position with the firm.

2. Retired Lieut. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, now employed by Hughes, denied Meyers' statements that Meyers bought $1000 worth of Republic Aviation Corp. stock for him.

Hughes left Washington yesterday convinced that "I'm not cut out for politics."

That was his reply to a question asked by a reporter, largely as a "gag," whether he intended to run for the Senate from California. Hughes said he wasn't coming back to Washington "any time soon."

Hughes took off from the National Airport flying his own converted bomber.

'Joan' de Gaulle

Vishinsky Likens 3 Foes To Fuehrer

New York, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky, in a speech bristling with praise of Soviet military might, tonight compared Winston Churchill, James Byrnes and Charles de Gaulle with two unsuccessful aggressors against Russia—Napoleon and Hitler.

Speaking before the banquet of the Council of Soviet-American Friendship, Vishinsky said the aim of Russian foreign policy was peace and security but that the U. S. S. R. was fully capable of defending itself.

Russia "welcomes" friendly relations with the United States and believes in good feelings and the good will of the American people, he said, but his reference to friendship was brief as he devoted four pages of a seven-page speech to extolling Soviet armed power and warning of the consequences of aggression.

Quotes Roosevelt

Vishinsky spoke at length of the heroic Russian defense against, and share in the defeat of, Hitler, then said:

"We sincerely suggest to all admirers and imitators of that cheap 'hero' who imagined himself to be a Napoleon without remembering the lessons of Napoleon's march to Moscow, we sincerely suggest to all of them—be they Churchill or Byrnes or De Gaulle, this unsuccessful Joan d'Arc, as he was dubbed by one of the most eminent statesmen of the United States, not to indulge in dangerous illusions about the USSR and to remember better the lessons of history."

(The "eminent statesman" to whom Vishinsky referred apparently was the late President Roosevelt. Mr. Roosevelt was quoted in Byrnes' book, "Speaking Frankly," as referring disparagingly to De Gaulle as a would-be, modern Joan of Arc.)

Warns Aggressors

The world was amazed at the strength the Red Army showed in fighting the Germans, Vishinsky said, and it now is evident that it is a "first-class army."

"The adventures, so font of knocking around in other peoples territories with knives in hands, had better remember it," he said.

He made a third thrust at would-be aggressors, recalling that there still were those who liked to think of Russia as the weak power she was in czarist days before the Red revolution.

"In any case the Soviet Union, the peoples of the Soviet Union, are willing to help them to wake up," he said. "It is high time they get rid of their dreams and look at the things in a sober way and try hard to see the world as it is."

5 Million Signatures Ask Anti-Lynching Bill

The Washington Post

PART OF CROWD GATHERED IN CAPITOL PLAZA AT NATIONAL ANTILYNCH RALLY AND PRAYER FOR PEACE YESTERDAY

A petition for a Federal anti-lynching bill was presented to Speaker of the House Joseph W. Martin yesterday afternoon by the National Negro Council which said the appeal was signed by five million persons.

The petition "will be submitted to the steering committee of the House with my recommendations for action," Speaker Martin said in accepting the document from Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, at the rally on the east steps of the Capitol.

"I appreciate the significance of this petition, not only from the 13 million of colored people, but also of others sympathetic to the cause," the Speaker told the more than 2000 persons present.

Asks Death Penalty

The petition asks legislation providing the death penalty for lynchers and a $25,000 fine against the county and State where the lynching occurs, for the benefit of the lynch victim's family.

"This demand is all the more imperative since the failure after a year has passed to apprehend or punish a single one of the perpetrators of the heinous lynching of two honorably discharged Negro war veterans and their wives by a known mob of unmasked men in broad daylight at Monroe, Ga.," Brown said in presenting the petition to the Speaker.

Deplores Lack of Protection

Negroes love their country, but experience "its inability, or unwillingness after 170 years to protect its citizens from the revenge and malicious impositions of other citizens," the Rev. Earl L. Harrison, pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church here and master of ceremonies, said.

"Thirteen million citizens groan under the yoke of second-class citizenship," the Rev. Hiram E. Smith of the Baltimore, Md., Baptist Ministers Conference, said, asking for "citizenship unencumbered by recial heritage."

Singing of the United Gospel Choruses of New York City was a feature of the prayer meeting and rally.

Two Czech Political Parties Defy Reds; 1 Elects Rightist

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Two political parties defied the Communists today as Czech Social Democrats named a right-wing chairman and Slovak Democrats in three cities defended the party record against Communist charges of treason.

Dohumil Lansman, youthful Minister of Industry and leader of the right-wing faction of the Czech Social Democrats, defeated Deputy Prime Minister Zdenek Fierlinger, 283 to 182, in the race for chairman at the annual party congress at Brno.

Observers saidLausman's victory was a definite sign the party would operate independently of the Communists. Fierlinger, wartime Ambassador to Moscow from the Czech government in exile, had stumped for close cooperation with the Communists with who dominate the natoinal front coalition government of Czechoslovakia.

In the semiautonomous province of Slovakia, officials of the majority Slovak Democratic Party charged the Communists with "abusing official power" in an attempt to squeeze out opposition groups andgain dictatorial control of the country.

Under steady Red pressure, the party's top minister in the national cabinet, Vice Premier Jan Ursiny, and eight party representatives in the provincial Slovak cabinet had been forced to resign. According to the Communists, the party had been harboring "anti-state elements," including supporters of the wartime regime of Nazi puppet, Josef Tiso.

Communist Riots Defended in Russia

Trade Publication Says Disorders In France, Italy Aimed at 'Reaction'

Moscow, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Justifying the Communist-led riots in France and Italy as a defense against "reaction," the official trade union organ Trud disclosed today that Russia was seeking to make the World Federation of Trade Unions a "militant" organization of 70 million workers.

The publication asserted that in Italy "American secret service agents" were supporting Fascist-type organizations and even supplying them with weapons.

Marshall Plan Attacked

After a long attack on the Marshall recovery plan, in which it asserted that "ruling circles" in France and Italy were carrying out orders of Wall Street, Trud announced that the presidium or executive of the Central Council of Soviet Trade Unions decided at a meeting Friday that the time had come for trade unions to take the offensive against "reaction."

As the result of Friday's meeting, Trud said, Russian delegates to an approaching meeting of the WFTU executive bureau in Paris would "try to assure that the world federation should be trasnformed into an efficient militant of the international working class."

The presidium, Trud said, made a "detailed decision placing before trade union organizations the tasks which issue from the present international situation."

Riots Are Defended

Discussing riots in Marseilles and Milan, Trud called them the direct result of "provocations" by supporters of the Marshall Plan.

"On the eve of consideration by Congress of the Marshall Plan it was necessary for French reaction to demonstrate to its masters in Wall Street its readiness to suppress the workers' protests, place the French working class on its knees and force it to accept a plan of enslavement," Trud said.

The Italian riots, Trud said, resulted from working class indignation because the government "is placing all its hopes on the American uncle's assistance."

Cholera Deaths Decline

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—The death toll from cholera throughout Egypt during the past 24 hours dropped to 46, and only 55 new cases, were reported.

Italy Reds Seek Foes' Offices

8000 population, 25 miles north of Foggia, near the "spur of the Italian boot, rioters sacked the headquarters of the Liberal and Christian Democratic parties and the local office of the Agrarian Association. Many of the rioters flourished Red hammer-and-sickle flags.

The local police reported to Foggia that there were no casualties, but requested reinforcements from Foggia and Rome to cope with the "tense" situation.

Ascoli Satriano is about 50 miles north of the town of Gerighola, where three persons were killed and 10 wounded yesterday in the bloodiest attack of the 12-day wave of violence.

Two workers were killed outright in the Cerignola fighting. A Carabiniere, injured by machine-gun fire, died later. Seven other policemen and three civilians were wounded.

A total of 12 persons has been killed in the Communist-sponsored demonstrations up to the present time.

Sabotage Declared Aim

Two soldiers were killed, two were missing and several other soldiers and civilians were injured in north Italy today in the explosion of an ammunition dump near the industrial city of Milan.

The ammunition explosion, at Vigevano 12 miles southwest of Milan, was the second of its kind in that area this week. The cause of the explosion was unknown, although Army authorities said the first explosion, last Friday, was probably an accident.

Rightist newspapers hinted today that the explosions were Communist sabotage intended to reduce the government's ammunition supplies.

France May Turn to Reynaud

Reynaud heretofore has encountered opposition from most Socialists as well as the Communists.

When he was last Premier, Reynaud had to give way to dictatorship of Marshal Henri Petain when his cabinet rejected a British proposal for fusion of Britain and France on the eve of the French collapse in 1940. Reynaud, however, was in favor of the fusion proposed by Winston Churchill.

While maneuvers were taking place on the national level, tension between the Communists and all other political parties in France built up in Paris a few hours before De Gaulle's Rally prepared to take over the city government.

Last month the Rally, a new political organization, elected an absolute majority of the city council in Paris, center of radical political movements for more than 150 years.

The new Paris council, at its Monday meeting, is expected to elect Pierre De Gaulle, brother of the general, as its chairman. This post corresponds to the office of mayor.

The Socialist newspaper Populaire said the Communists were planning to duplicate in the capital the attack they made Wednesday on the Palace of Justice and the City Hall in Marseille. The Communist move is being arranged, the paper charged, on orders of the new Communist international organization, The Cominform, with headquarters in Belgrade.

Special police precautions are being taken at the Paris city hall to prevent a repetition of the Marseille disorders in which one man was killed and 30 to 50 injured.

There is this parallel in the situations of Paris and Marseille:

In Marseille the disorders broke out after Mayor Michel Carlini, also a member of the Rally, had taken control from a Communist city government. Carlini was among those injured in the rioting. In Paris De Gaulle's followers will replace a city government which has been controlled by Communists and Socialists.

OPEN LETTER TO

Members of the House of Representatives

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE:

"... The Hollywood investigation has been producing a good deal of nonsense and very little else."

PITTSBURGH POST GAZETTE:

"... The variety show in Washington thus far is a flop."

DES MOINES REGISTER:

"The UN-American Committee is determined to put the thinking and writing and the performing in Hollywood in such narrow, intellectual shackles that no view can possibly be expressed except those which accord with the deadening dogmas and timid mentalities of the most reactionary fringe."

WASHINGTON POST:

"What the Committee has tried to do throughout these hearings is to set up a black list. And this, we think, amounts to an infringement of the freedom of the screen."

DETROIT FREE PRESS:

"The Hypocritically named Committee on Un-American Activities should be abolished at the earliest possible moment by the United States Congress and so deeply buried that no other group of publicity-mad zealots could ever be allowed to tarnish with their stench the greatest institution of our halls of legislation."

LONDON EVENING STANDARD:

"To what depths of intolerance have its members sunk ... With what moral authority can a democracy rebuke other nations for the invasion of human dignity and liberty when the cause it stands for is itself scarred by such an institution ..."

LONDON TIMES:

"But it is hard to understand why the Congress of the United States provides a platform for this sort of thing."

THE undersigned witnesses, subpoenaed by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, dubbed "unfriendly" by the Committee in advance of their appearance, ten of whom have been cited for contempt of the Congress by the Committee, most respectfully address themselves to you.

We earnestly request that you consider these few facts. The indignation of the press and the people of the world was called forth by the clear intention of the Committee to censor and control the popular and patriotic American Motion Picture Industry. This was indicated by the Committee's dictatorial demands, its anti-constitutional bias and its fearful proscription of discussion.

What occasioned the comments in leading newspapers, so injurious to the prestige and dignity of this country? Was it the invocation of constitutional safeguards against tyranny by the witnesses or was it the unparalleled terrorization of an industry, its management and employees, by the Committee? May any self respecting American industry supinely submit to public whipping, intimidation and threats of censorial reprisals? Did not the employees of the motion picture industry who were cited in resisting invasion of their minds, opinions and associations, take a principled stand in protecting their industry, all industry, all employees, the Bill of Rights, the American people and the Congress itself?

We are certain the Congress will not be stampeded, will inform itself fully concerning the record of the hearings and will act, in the highest tradition of a great deliberative body, only when it is in complete possession of all the facts.

We believe that it is not too late for the Congress to undo the harm which has been done it and the American people, by voting down the citations, thus placing itself on record in support of a way of life based upon law, tradition and human freedom and dignity.

List Of Entries

The concourse leading to the 1948 Republican presidential nomination is becoming crowded. Harold Stassen has been in there running for a long time. Senator Taft recently dropped all pretense that he is only a passive participant. Now Governor Warren of California admits that he is in the race. And these three candid souls are only a few of the candidates who are actually vying for the honor of contesting possession of the White House with President Truman.

More interesting than the number of candidates, we think, is the varying paces at which they are running. Former Governor Stassen is maintaining a steady and unrelenting gallop with all the energy and determination at his command. Senator Taft is running with all his might, but in a plodding sort of way that is characteristic of him. Governor Dewey of New York gives the impression of trying to make double-quick time without any show of motion in his legs. Senator Vandenberg is still on the sidelines and seems to be waiting for someone to push him out into the stream of entries. While Governor Warren is out on the track and moving in the direction of the finishing line, he wants it distinctly understood that he is not getting up a sweat; he is a walking rather than a running candidate.

General MacArthur apparently has no intention of running with the other candidates. But we should not be surprised if he takes a sort of cosmic leap toward the nomination. In any event, his approach will be ethereal. As for General Eisenhower, he is definitely not running for the nomination, at least not yet. But this may be chiefly because of his happy discovery that by backing away from the nomination he is able to create a vacuum that seems to draw it ever nearer to his grasp.

CED Tax Program–II

The tax reduction program of the Committee for Economic Development rests on the assumption that tax rates should be set sufficiently high to yield a three-billion-dollar surplus at a level of national income consistent with high employment. Contrary to the impression conveyed by some news summaries, the committee does not recommend a six-billion-dollar cut in taxes in 1948. It merely says that assuming a 7 per cent drop in the price level from the third quarter of 1947 and a national income of 197 billion dollars, tax reduction could amount to six billion dollars without trenching on the three-billion-dollar surplus. As a matter of fact, the committee says that final decisions on 1948 tax policy must be deferred until we have a clearer picture of the expenditure outlook and the degree of inflationary pressure then prevailing.

Viewed as an initial tax reduction program to be given effect only when conditions permit, the CED report is a real contribution to tax reform. In particular we commend the proposals to reduce surtax rates as a half-way step toward the still lower levels recommended for the CED long-range tax program effective sometime in the 1950s. The suggested initial reductions in individual income tax schedules would benefit low-bracket taxpayers and also ameliorate the deterrent effect on private initiative and risk-taking resulting from extremely high rates at upper income levels. Owing to the contemplated revenue losses, estimated at more than three billion dollars, a gradual approach is the only feasible method of procedure.

In conformity with the stabilizing budget policy advocated in the CED report, the projected long-range recommendations assume that the program will become effective in some year when Federal cash expenditures have been reduced to about 30 billion dollars and the national income necessary to insure high employment has risen to 220 billion dollars. Obviously if these objectives are not realized, modifications of the tax reduction program will be necessary. Accepting these assumptions provisionally, the long-range program calls for further reductions in income tax rates, lowering of the tax on corporate profits, averaging of individual incomes to correct inequitable treatment of taxpayers with fluctuating incomes, and lengthening of the period for carrying forward business losses. The last named recommendation is urged particularly on behalf of new or risky enterprises. The proposal to make future issues of State and municipal bonds taxable is a long overdue reform that would close a broad avenue of tax escape now open to the wealthy.

On the other hand, the suggestion that business managements should be permitted to use their own judgment "within limits of reason" in establishing depreciation rates is open to objection. Admitting the crying need for greater flexibility of depreciation rates, leaving the determination of such rates to taxpayers would encourage grave abuses. While administration of the law imposing penalty taxes on unreasonable accumulation of profits affords just cause of complaint, we do not believe that remedial action should take the form of putting the burden of proof of unreasonableness on the Treasury by assuming in case of operating companies that such accumulations are reasonable.

Although income taxes in the lower brackets would be substantially reduced under the long-range program, taxes at lower levels would not be eliminated for the all-sufficient reason that "total income in the upper brackets is too small to furnish needed revenues." However, balance would be introduced into the program by dropping all Federal excises except those on alcoholic beverages, tobacco and gasoline, thereby cutting excise revenue yields nearly 50 per cent and lightening the burdens of indirect taxation for low income groups.

Studies of this kind serve a valuable purpose by directing attention to the ultimate objectives of tax reform and indicating ways and means of reaching the desired goal. They also minimize the ever-present danger that Congress will hastily pass tax legislation of a haphazard character in response to political pressure, thus further dislocating our unbalanced tax structure.

"Extra" Session

Today promises to be a historic occasion. President Truman will carry to Capitol Hill his message designed to initiate the adoption of an American policy of underwriting economic recovery in Western Europe. Never before have the statesmen of any one country gone so far in planning to aid neighboring peoples for the sake of maintaining a free world society. Congress will be asked to give its blessing to this policy and to vote funds to sustain it in a nonpartisan spirit that will strengthen our influence throughout the world. We have no doubt that each member of the House and Senate as well as the President will feel that he is acting in the spotlight of history as well as under the eyes of hungry millions across the Atlantic.

This reassembly of Congress is usually spoken of as an extra session, and in the popular sense of the word that is what it is. The Constitution gives the President power to summon Congress "on extraordinary occasions," and he has appropriately used that power. When the two houses suspended their work last July, however, they did not adjourn sine die ("without day" for reconvening). Instead, they recessed until January 2, 1948, four days before the esecond regular session of the Eightieth Congress begins. This was to give the majority leaders the right to bring Congress back into session if they believed such a course to be desirable at any time during the recess. Even though the call was issued by the President, the constitutional experts say that he is simply terminating the recess and that Congress will not, therefore, be technically in extra session.

In significance, however, the return of Congress is certainly "extraordinary." Its immediate task will be to approve aid to Italy, France, Austria and possibly other democratic countries that are in danger of an economic collapse. And this action will be symbolic. It is inevitably linked with the larger program of assisting our former allies —those that are interested in the maintenance of freedom and popular government— to regain an equilibrium that will insulate them against the dangers of chaos and communism. The basic idea, as John Foster Dulles told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the other day, is not "the rebuilding of prewar Europe, but the building of a new Europe which, more unified, will be a better Europe."

Thus far, the outlook for the session is good. Committees in both houses have already conducted hearings and are planning to report interim aid bills promptly. The Republican Policy Committee of the Senate has agreed to prompt action on the bills. After hearing the President's message the Senate will recess until November 24 to prevent the diversion of attention to other matters. Cooperation is also promised in the House. These are hopeful auguries.

There is a good deal of astonishment over this prospect of a Republican Congress and a Democratic President thus working together to implement a comparatively new foreign policy, and, of course, disagreements over some details must be expected. We surmise, however, that every one of these policy-makers has had his ear to the ground. Most of them have heard emphatic demands from the American people for an effective program to safeguard the fruits of our recent costly victory. These demands have not sprung from a partisan spirit. They reflect the deep common sense and cool judgment of the American people as a whole. What Congress will really be expected to do, in our opinion, is to implement the national will, and we cannot believe that Congress will fail in that responsibility.

Contempt For Law

Judging from some of the arguments Russian delegates have made before the General Assembly, they must regard the United Nations as an amorphous sort of agency revolving around the veto. Their latest complaint was directed against a resolution urging more extensive use of the International Court of Justice. Mr. Vishinsky had made intemperate charges that the creation of a "Little Assembly," at the United States' request, was a means of bypassing the United Nations Charter. That would seem to call for an impartial interpretation of the Assembly's powers under the Charter. But when it was suggested that the Assembly urge United Nations bodies to ask for a periodic review by the World Court of legal controversies, including interpretation of disputed sections of the Charter, Mr. Vishinsky vehemently objected to that. Fortunately, his unreasoning protests were overridden by a vote of 46 to 6.

There are many questions, of course, which the World Court cannot properly decide. It takes only cases twining on juridical issues, such as the proper interpretation of a treaty or of specific provisions of the U. N. Charter. But on issues of this sort it is more competent to make decisions than any other international body. Like our own Supreme Court, it has the great advantage of lifting justiciable controversies out of an emotional atmosphere and of bringing to bear upon them the judgment of men selected for their competence in knowing international law and their integrity in applying it impartially.

What Mr. Vishinsky has said, in both words and actions of unmistakable meaning, is that he wants no such impartial interpretation of the Charter. He insists on being free to twist it to suit his own convenience. At least he is thoroughly consistent with the contempt for law that always marks a police state.

DPs And Dollars

The House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee that was appointed to make recommendations in regard to displaced persons has returned from a European inspection tour properly impressed by the need for prompt action to provide permanent homes for these unfortunates. The committee offers a number of excellent suggestions for speeding resettlement of the DPs, such as calling an international conference to establish DP quotas among participating nations and urging admission of DPs to this country outside regular immigration quotas. If Congress were to consent to a lowering of the bars that exclude homeless aliens, who are mostly refugees from political oppression, such action would, the committee concludes, provide "just the leadership needed to make the international conference a success."

Strangely enough, after indorsing the conference method of devising a solution of the DP problem, the committee proposes to coerce other countries into receiving their "fair share" of the people living in DP camps by denying them aid under the Marshall Plan in case of refusal. In our opinion, a worse method of handling the difficult political and economic issues raised by the resettlement of displaced persons could hardly be devised. For it would give the lie to our assurances that the Marshall plan will not be used as a weapon of political coercion—a means of imposing our will on beneficiary nations. Furthermore, we think it would be intolerably presumptuous for the United States to decide for other nations how many displaced persons represent their fair share of the numbers awaiting placement in new homes. The very fact that American aid is required to save the countries seeking our aid from economic collapse emphasizes the difficulties they face in providing food, housing and other essentials for immigrants.

We do not say that opportunities for useful employment of DPs do not exist in western Europe. On the contrary, the retention in France and Great Britain of great numbers of German prisoners who labor in fields and factories is evidence of a shortage of manpower that is holding back production. Nevertheless, the repatriation of German prisoners of war and the dispersion of displaced persons raise issues to which solutions should be found by mutual agreement of all the nations concerned. A sensible, humane handling of these interrelated problems will not be insured by using dollars to bribe unwilling nations to indorse a program made in the United States.

Dalton's Indiscretion

It is doubtful whether the most acceptable of treasury heads could have survived the blow dealt to the reputation of Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer, Hugh Dalton, by giving advance information of his budget program to the press. To Americans the importance attached to secrecy in regard to budget proposals may seem exaggerated. But that is largely because of the vital difference between the methods of handling budgetary programs here and in Great Britain. In the United States the executive budget recommendations are often rejected and are almost certain to be revised by Congress. Consequently, advance information on the presidential budget statement affords no basis for its illegitimate use by those "in the know." In Great Britain, on the other hand, the budget is presented by a responsible head of the party in control and constitutes the basis for legislative action.

Since the press leak in the present instance immediately preceded delivery of the budget speech, no great harm was done by the premature disclosure. Nevertheless, as Prime Minister Attlee pointed out in his letter accepting Mr. Dalton's resignation, the principle of inviolability of the budget is of the "highest importance." Violation of that principle by the Chancellor of the Exchequer himself would, therefore, have been an all-sufficient excuse for dismissal, irrespective of the dissatisfaction with his conduct of affairs.

WINGED VICTORY

These are bitter days, when one remembers
Not so much orange berries on the vine
As gnarled and blackened twigs of old Novembers,
Unwholesome mornings dank and sharp as brine,
The buzzard's ominous flight above the timber,
The sullen red of sunset seen through smoke,
The broken wagon, like a cannon-limber,
Stalled in the dubious shelter of the oak.
This is no peace of fruitful Autumn dreaming;
It is a pause for choked, reluctant breath,
While half the fields that gird the earth are teeming
With men who scatter dragons' teeth of death.
We sowed the wind, and we shall reap the whirlwind:
The earth is desolate because we sinned.

Security Firings

In the criticisms of our State Department in its security firings, I have read none that looked at it from State's viewpoint. Apparently the majority of criticizers believe that evidence and judgment in this matter can be as definite as adding two and two.

The department has never revealed the names of the persons dismissed. They were free to find employment elsewhere without limitations. Not even intimate associates needed to have known what had happened unless the individuals themselves chose to talk. It was only through press reports that they were publicized throughout the country.

The "Case History of a 'Bad Risk'" which appeared in The Washington Post of November 2, states that Mr. Blank (of this case) was regarded by the State Department on the results of eight months shadowing by FBI as a bad security risk. He was not accused of disloyalty.

In July, Mr. Blank appeared before the State Department fourman panel to make any statement he wished incorporated in his record, and at that time Mr. Robinson of State said, ". . . this action was taken on a ground of doubt as to security. We bear in mind in these cases that there is a definite difference between the word 'security' and the word 'loyalty'. I think loyalty must necessarily be a conscious proposition. Security, or lack of it, might be conscious or unconscious."

America, with its thousands of recent immigrants—and children born of immigrants here and brought up in the tradition of other lands, has a security risk that many other countries do not have. Naturalized citizenship in a country does not erase the sentiment in the human heart for the soil in which the roots of its ancestry are generations deep.

Another type of risk in positions of confidence is the very free mixer and constant talker, especially if he is a user of alcohol. There may be nothing against character or ability of the person in this supposition, but he may make unconscious misuse of judgment and of speech The right of the private employer to remove an employe believed indiscriminate in handling information of a confidential nature is never questioned.

As for charges and a possible trial, any fair-minded person believes they should be accorded the accused. But if, under present conditions and procedures, making charges would reveal that which is still security information, which should be sacrificed, the security of a Nation, or that of an individual?

That is what State officials are faced with. That is what many people who have made themselves heard publicly, but who have no responsibility in the matter, seem not to have taken into consideration.

Milk To Bulgaria

I read in your edition of November 3, an article from Sofia, Bulgaria, telling that a cargo of 300 tons of powdered milk and cocoa had arrived from the United States for Bulgarian children. The cable does not tell which American relief organization shipped the cargo there.

I think that the children of western European countries like England, France, Belgium and others which suffered so much during the war need the milk more than the Bulgarians and should have priority. What assurance is there that this milk would not be used by the Russian army in Bulgaria?

Bulgaria is a typical agricultural country. I had the opportunity of learning the economic structure of this country first hand when I lived there for almost a year and visited both north and south. Almost 90 per cent of the people are peasants and make their living from agriculture. Their soil is very rich and the peasants have a great deal of land. Even very small rural communities have large common pastures of thousands of acres which the peasant member of the community has a right to use for his cattle without fee. Bulgaria did not suffer during or after the war and her agriculture should be quite self-sufficient.

Bulgarian children need other things like clothes and medicine which could be shipped them when the priorities for other countries have been filled. Sending 300 tons of powdered milk to Bulgaria is sheer waste of precious food. If sent to the right places it could help to stop the development of tuberculosis among the children of our allies.

Fertilizer For Europe

If I heard Sir John Boyd Orr correctly in answer to a question put to him in his broadcast over Station WINX Thursday, he believes that Denmark would make tremendous contributions to feeding western Europe if she had sufficient fertilizers and farm equipment. He said, in effect, that huge quantities of nitrogen explosives and war machines had been made in factories which could now be turned to providing what Denmark and other food producing countries need.

Do these factories exist in Germany? If so, why are they not placed at the disposal of the FAO?

This is one way in which the Marshall Plan could be made to dovetail with work already done by the United Nations, to which the American people have given wholehearted support from the beginning.

Hollywood Stories

Quite obviously, the Red Fascists, the "crypto-boys," and the sympathetic-to-Russia "liberals" are thirsting for the blood of The Washington Post reporter Mary Spargo.

It all appears to arise from the fact that Miss Spargo conscientiously aplied "terms of identification" to various individuals and groups which figured in the recent hearings conducted by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Miss Spargo applied such "terms of identification" as, Representative Thomas "(R., N. J.)," "movie star" Robert Taylor, and Robert W. Kenny, "president of the National Lawyers Guild, cited by former Attorney General Biddle as a Communist front," etc.

Representative Thomas has not complained about having been "identified" as a Republican from New Jersey; Mr. Taylor has not objected to the "label" pinned on him; but Mr. Robert J. Silberstein, "executive secretary, National Lawyers Guild, cited by former Attorney General Biddle as a Communist front," and others, have complained about "the calling of names and the attachment of labels." Mr. Robert J. Silberstein, after registering his complaint about "the calling of names and the attachment of labels," proceeds in a letter published November 7, to suggest the "line" Miss Spargo should follow whenever she identifies the National Lawyers Guild, or its officials.

The "line" prescription technique has been brought to a high state of development in Russia and other similar "democracies," and the "executive secretaries" of certain groups in this country appear to possess a great deal of "authority" over the "line" followed within their groups, but I am a little shocked at witnessing this attempt to apply the "line control" technique to American newspapers and American reporters.

China Policy

It was most gratifying to read that Secretary of State George C. Marshall finally loosened up a bit, on November 12, on the subject of aid to China. Both before the House Foreign Affairs Committee and at a press conference, the Secretary was vigorously questioned, all queries being aimed at clarification of our national policy toward China. No clear-cut China policy, however, was visible, even after reading between the lines of the few answers that Marshall gave.

Considerable dissatisfaction has been voiced recently over Marshall's suppression of the Wedemeyer report on China, but it is perhaps only fair to say that his action in doing so may be "in the best interest of the Chinese government and our Government." What is far more important than publication of the report is that Secretary Marshall announce our China policy as newly based on the Wedemeyer findings, for without a clearcut policy our people and their representatives in Congress will not fully understand what they are voting for.

When Representative James G. Fulton asked Marshall whether Congress would be expected to act on proposals for aid to China without seeing the Wedemeyer report, the Congressman was actually making the wrong approach by pressing for publication of a secret report instead of urging pronouncement of a definite policy to be pursued.

Representative Walter Judd was more realistic. He was asking for such a policy pronouncement when he pointed out that China's current expenses for prosecution of the anti-Communistic campaign amount to 70 or 80 per cent of the national budget and suggested that we help China in a military way.

That Judd's suggestion is sound is evident when Marshall's announced plans for China are closely studied. The Secretary admitted that his aid proposal, so far, would probably not deal with the problem of the civil war and the resulting drain on the Chinese treasury, but would instead be "more directly related to the financial situation in China." One of these financial problems, he added, was how to give aid to people in Communist - occupied areas without letting such aid go to the Communist armies.

There is, without doubt, only one answer to this problem, namely that Marshall's plan for relief of the unfortunates in Red areas of China is impossible unless prompt aid be given to first enable Chiang Kai-shek's armies to recapture such areas. In fact, practically none of the proposed aid items for China, mentioned by Marshall, such as the rehabilitation of certain railways, harbors and coal mines, would be of such permanent advantage to the Chinese government in its present difficulties or toward creation of a peaceful China—such as we so earnestly desire—as long as the destructive Communist hordes are allowed to roam from one end of the country to the other.

The answer, therefore, is to arm, equip and otherwise aid the Nationalist forces of China so as to enable them to defeat and wipe out the Communist forces that constitute the root of most of China's present problems and that are now in the act of destroying the economy of the country and literally slaughtering the Chinese whom Marshall so aptly refers to as "a very unhappy people."

In Propria Persona

THE PERSON AND THE COMMON GOOD, by Jacques Maritain; translated by John J. Fitzgerald. (Scribner, $2.)

"Personalism," or "personal idealism," is a name usually given to a philosophical school in the tradition of Leibnitz which holds that ultimate reality consists in a plurality of psychic units, or independent persons. But M. Maritain, whose followers sometimes speak of themselves as "Christian personalists," is at some pains in these essays to remove any danger of confusion between his own doctrine and that of the idealists. "There are," he observes, "at least a dozen personalist doctrines, which . . . have nothing more in common than the term." M. Maritain's Thomistic definition of personality has not quite the simplicity and clarity of M. Gilson's "individuality plus intellect," but it appears to amount to pretty much the same thing.

Individuality is the opposite of universality; it is the "concrete state of unity and indivision, required by existence, in which every actually or possibly existing nature can posit itself in existence as distinct from other beings." All corporeal beings, or things, have individuality, including men. But as material individuals, men have "only a precarious unity, which tends to be scattered in multiplicity; for in itself matter is inclined to disintegration, just as space is inclined to division." Thus it is a contradiction to speak of the freedom of the individual, for as individuals men have no freedom, since they are bound by the determinist laws of the physical universe. Freedom, then, is possible only in a spiritual existence; but a being with such an existence may become, by the operation of the intellect and by way of knowledge and love, "a universe unto itself, a relatively independent whole within the great whole of the universe, facing the transcendent whole which is God." This, it seems, is what is meant by personality. It consists, says M. Maritain, in being what you are. Liberty consists in the freedom to be or to neglect to be yourself. If a man chooses to follow the inclination of his material individuality, his personality will "tend to be adulterated and to dissolve." Evil, then, is the neglect of the needs of the person for the desires of the material individual, which is to say neglect of "the life of the spirit and of liberty" for the life of "the senses and passions." Here, apparently, lies the error of anarchism and bourgeois liberalism, which by confusing the individual for the person, encourages the disintegration of the human being; "the heart becomes atrophied and the senses exacerbated, or else all that is most human in man recoils into a vacuum veiled in frivolity." Idealism, on the contrary, attempts an impossible separation of the person and the individual, and strives to replace the human heart "with the heart of an angel." What it thus achieves is not "the authentic person, exhibiting the mysterious visage of the Creator," but "the austere mask of the Pharisee."

Society is necessary to the dignity of the human person, since man needs the help of others not merely in the satisfaction of his material needs but in cultivation of reason and the pursuit of virtue. Society exists for the common good, which consists not merely of public services, such as schools and police, but "of all the activity, material prosperity and spiritual riches, of moral rectitude, justice, friendship, happiness, virtue and heroism in the individual lives of its members," for these things are to a degree communicable. Conversely, violations of treaties, political assassination, unjust wars and so on, however advantageous they may be to governments, are nevertheless destructive of the common good. The common good, of course, requires that each shall contribute as well as receive, and this implies the principle of subordination and command and the necessity of placing restraints upon personality; yet "in the measure that these restraints and sacrifices are required and accepted in the name of justice and amity, they raise higher the spiritual level of the person." Thus there can never be a real conflict between the good of the person and the common good, properly conceived; an apparent opposition of one to the other arises only where the common good is conceived not as the reciprocal benefactions of the citizen and the community, but as the mere sum of individual goods. This concept, of course, underlies the old-fashioned bourgeois liberalism with its doctrine that the sole duty of the community is to enforce contracts and protect property. M. Maritain considers the concept inherently anarchistic and ultimately productive of totalitarianism, since it forces the individual "to transfer both his responsibilities and the care of his destiny to the artificial whole which has been superimposed upon him and to which he is bound mechanically."

Liberalism, communism and fascism, indeed, are three translations into the political order of the materialist conception of man. Of the three, M. Maritain considers liberalism the most irreligious, and that its tolerance in religious matters has arisen partly from skepticism, partly from a cynical desire to employ religion as a sort of moral police for the protection of property. Communism, despite its materialistic premises, belongs, M. Maritain believes, in the humanist and rationalist tradition of which it represents the final phase, and for that reason may be considered "the ultimate and altogether radical Christian heresy."

Today And Tomorrow

Recovery And U. S. Diplomacy

Lippmann

LAST WEEK in his statement to Congress Mr. Marshall said that the operation of the European recovery program "must fully accord with the foreign policy of the President as expressed through the Secretary of State." Before that will be possible, however, it will be necessary to find out whether the foreign policy of the President and his Secretary of State is in accord with the European recovery program. For the large sums which the program requires are being asked of Congress on the premise that over a period of years Europe will have attained, or will be well within sight of, solvency, that what UNRRA, the British loan, the Monetary Fund and the World Bank have proved unable to achieve the European recovery program will achieve.

No candid student of the problem can certify such a happy ending to the story. But he can say that this program is sure to fail, and that it will become merely a series of annual doles, if the State Department is unable to plan a policy to overcome the division of Germany and of Europe. For the program assumes, the program demands, a resolute, lucid, and coherent diplomatic campaign to unify Europe, to raise the iron curtain, and to settle the war. Considering the immense resources, the military power, and the influence which are at the disposal of the State Department, it ought not to be impossible to develop such a policy.

THE MAKINGS of such a policy—which would marry the Marshall Plan to Secretary Marshall's diplomacy — were stated, but not developed, at the beginning of Mr. Marshall's statement to Congress last week.

He said that we wish to see the whole European community "restored as one of the pillars of world security, in a position to renew its contribution to the advancement of mankind and to the development of a world order based on law and respect for the individual." But, he said, "despite our efforts, not all of the European nations have been left free to take their place in the community of which they form a natural part." These unfree nations are, he said, those which lie east of that "line of division in Europe which is roughly the line upon which the Anglo-American armies coming from the west met those of the Soviet Union coming from the east." Here "the war ended with the armies of the major allies meeting in the heart of this (the European) community." Of the major allies "only one power, the Soviet Union, does not for its own reasons share this aim"—that is to say, the restoration of a free European community.

Thus on Secretary Marshall's analysis of the problem the Soviet Union is able to prevent the restoration of the European community, and to keep the eastern nations from taking their natural place in it, because the Soviet army is still in the heart of the European community.

IT FOLLOWS, does it not, that the restoration of Europe and the freedom of the nations, will be achieved only if the Soviet army can be induced or compelled to withdraw from the heart of Europe—to move back from the Elbe River in the center of Germany to the Russian frontiers of 1945—a distance of approximately 500 miles.

Mr. Marshall's analysis of the problem has not, however, been accepted as the working basis of our foreign policy. For if it had been, we should be saying to the world that our objective is not to contain Russia at the dividing line in the heart of Europe, nor to stop communism at the Elbe River, but to let Europe reunite, and its nations recover their independence—and that our policy to achieve this great end is to bring about a settlement for Germany and Austria which calls for the evacuation of the whole of Europe by all the non-European armies, now facing one another in the heart of it.

THOUGH this policy would be nothing but an application of the classic, orthodox, and tested method of ending a war and establishing peace, it has had a curious reception. What it is now the fashion to call our "policy makers" say, on the one hand, that it is utopian to suppose that the Russians will ever agree to such a settlement, and that on the other, the Russians may themselves propose it, and then it will be undesirable. But to be afraid your opponent will not agree and to be afraid that he will is not a healthy state of mind in which to make decisions affecting the destiny of a great nation. It is not diplomacy. It is a neurosis.

AN EXPERIENCED man of affairs, or a military commander, or a good diplomat who has to make a great decision of policy will want to know what he will have accomplished if he succeeds, and where he will be if he does not succeed.

Let us begin by considering what will be the American position in the world if we are the first to declare that our paramount objective is a German and Austrian treaty which, on the basis of compromises about reparations, the status of the Ruhr, the structure of the German government, and the like, provides for a scheduled withdrawal of Russian, American and British troops. Let us suppose that the Russians refuse to agree to such a treaty at the forthcoming London conference, and show that they will not now make the compromises that are needed to achieve the treaty.

What is our position then? It is an immensely strong one. For having made ourselves the champions of the unity of Europe, the unity of Germany, the liberators of the continent from the burden and oppression of alien armies, all the elemental forces of nationalism, pride and hope, all the deep instincts of all peoples against foreign domination, will gather in our cause. Time will work for our diplomacy. For each day that the occupation continues the resistance and revulsion must grow stronger against the power that is clearly identified as the one which prevents the military evacuation and the political liberation of the continent.

AND WHAT if the policy succeeds—if not at this conference in London then at a later one, next spring, next autumn, next year? Then the Russian army will move back 500 miles from the heart of Europe to the frontiers of Europe. This decisive change in the balance of power will, on Secretary Marshall's own showing, remove the principal force which now prevents the eastern nations of Europe from taking their "place in the community of which they form a natural part." It will also remove the fear and the threat which hangs over western Europe, which is that the massive infantry of the Soviet Union might overrun it.

Then the economic cooperation and mutual aid which are the sine qua non of the European recovery program will have a chance to become effective.

Truman to Hand Congress Aid and Price Task Today

unanimous in describing Europe's plight as desperate and American aid its only hope.

Riots Diverting Attention

In Italy and France, chief objects of stopgap help, Communist riots are diverting attention from this Nation's accelerated relief program. This fact was said to have increased the President's anxiety that the emergency bill be enacted promptly and by a vote large enough to reassure those two countries.

Mr. Truman was not expected to go into the four-year Marshall Plan in his address today, saving that for another message to be delivered possibly in about 10 days. Nevertheless, stopgap aid is closely allied with the long-range plan and its consideration inevitably will be shadowed by the implications of that program.

For that reason, the expected report tomorrow of the Geneva conferees on tariff revision probably will influence debate on emergency help. While the report no doubt will be accepted as evidence of the desire of nations participating in the Marshall Plan to go along with the basic intent of the plan, its provisions are likely to arouse some criticism among members of Congress and their constituents.

The intention of congressional leaders to lose no time in bringing aid legislation to the floor was manifest in the fact that the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate and the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House began hearings last week. Chairman Eaton (R., N. J.) of the House committee already has said he hoped to have a bill on the floor by early next week. Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) of the Senate body has called his colleagues together today to begin drafting legislation.

Both committees were told by Secretary of State Marshall that France, Italy and Austria would need 597 million dollars to carry them over until the 16-nation Marshall Plan could be put into effect. He warned that Italy would be facing starvation by December 1 and France and Austria by December 31.

Representative Herter (R., Mass.), chairman of a committee which studied relief needs in Europe, raised the question of this Nation's ability to meet Italy's needs for wheat and warned of "heavy and perhaps intolerable" sacrifices facing Americans if needs for steel and petroleum were to be met.

On the other hand, Commerce Secretary Harriman told the Senate the United States could meet Secretary Marshall's figure for stopgap aid without seriously straining its economy. Two conditions attached to his forecast were that grain be carefully conserved here and export controls be retained.

While leaders of both parties in Congress were fairly well agreed on the necessity of bolstering western Europe against communism, there appeared room for considerable and wide disagreement on means of combatting the high cost of living. While there was not much question that Mr. Truman would have to be granted some new powers to cope with living costs, the nature and extent of these was a matter of much debate.

In the first place, European aid was irrevocably tied in with prices at home. On this basis the first evidence of a split along party lines was furnished by Chairman Bender (R., Ohio) of a subcommittee of the Joint Economic Committee when he reported after a survey of the Midwest that the Administration's export program was chiefly responsible for high prices. His report, agreed to by two Republican members of his subcommittee and rejected by one Republican and two Democratic members, was sent back for redrafting by the full committee.

On the other hand, Senator Flanders (R., Vt.), chairman of a similar subcommittee investigating conditions in the East, blamed high purchasing power and low production generally for high prices. Flanders himself took the position that rationing was "inescapable," a stand in which he said the members of his committee concurred.

Members of both Houses and of both parties have not been backward in assessing blame, officially and unofficially, for current high prices. The outstanding similarity among their views is their wide divergence.

Expectations were that relief legislation would be promptly enacted, even though it might not coincide exactly with the Administration's requests. Action to halt the price spiral was another matter, with nobody willing to venture a prediction as to its character, the length of debate, when or even whether it would be taken.

As usual at the beginning of a session, Congress was assailed with criticisms and suggestions both from within and without.

The Progressive Citizens of America issued a statement calling for relief for "all nations in need," with priority for those "which suffered most at the hands of fascism."

Chairman Hope (R., Kans.) of the House Agriculture Committee said approval of the Marshall Plan might wreck chances of enacting a long-range farm program next year by assuring a substantial market in Europe. He emphasized that he did not oppose European aid.

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) reported widespread interest in his proposal for an excess profits tax as a weapon against high prices.

Tomorrow's Taxes

By Ernest Lindley

The Republican Program

MUCH OF THE OPPOSITION in Congress to the proposed foreign aid program springs from the fact that outlays on the scale planned would just about wipe out what is left of the Republican program for cutting the budget and taxes.

Only a year ago, in the aftermath of victory at the polls, Republican leaders were promising heavy cuts in the budget and an immediate 20 per cent slash in the personal income tax. After the Eightieth Congress convened, the Republicans projected a cut of six billion dollars in President Truman's budget of 37.5 billion dollars. House Republicans pledged themselves, in effect, to a cut of this depth. The Senate Republicans fixed savings of 4.5 billion dollars as a more realistic objective.

How much Congress actually "saved" is still a matter of dispute. The Budget Bureau estimated that the cuts actually made by Congress would shake down to approximately $1,800,000,000. These were largely offset by new appropriations initiated by Congress or requested by the Administration and approved by Congress. The net result, as estimated by the Budget Bureau in August, was that expenditures for the current fiscal year would be 37 billion dollars—only half a billion dollars less than Mr. Truman had estimated in January.

NOW IT IS PROPOSED to add nearly 2.7 billion dollars to expenditures on foreign aid during the current fiscal year, ending June 30, 1948. In round figures, this includes 600 million dollars in stopgap aid for Austria, France, and Italy; 500 million dollars additional for the occupied areas; 1.5 billion dollars to carry the European recovery program during the last three months of the fiscal year; and a little for China.

Assuming no other changes, up or down, this added foreign aid would increase total expenditures for the current fiscal year to approximately 39.7 billion dollars. In August, the Budget Bureau estimated income at 41.7 billion dollars. The next estimate, in January, will be considerably higher—perhaps as high as 44 billion dollars or 45 billion dollars. This would leave a margin of four or five billion dollars for tax or debt reduction. But the Republican tax bill vetoed by the President last summer probably would cut revenues by more than five billion dollars annually at the current level of national income.

There is little prospect that total Federal expenditures during the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, 1948, will be much below this year if the foreign aid program projected by the Administration is approved. Congress cut almost everything else close to the bone last spring. The only large item which might be cut substantially is national defense and reductions under that heading would involve risks which a Congress which sees the need for a European recovery program almost certainly would shun.

SO, AGAIN for the next fiscal year, it seems unlikely that the margin between estimated income and estimated outgo will exceed five billion dollars or six billion dollars. And even a margin of that size would suppose that present levels of prices and production continue until July 1, 1949. A moderate recession would sharply reduce tax revenues.

Representative Knutson's plan to put through the tax bill vetoed last spring, perhaps combined with a provision permitting all married couples to divide their incomes, and then to follow this tax relief with a general tax revision bill, is plainly out of the question if an adequate foreign aid program is to be paid for out of current revenues. Room may be found for one tax cut, somewhat smaller than that voted last summer. But room for more can be made only at the risk, if not the certainty, of putting the Federal budget back in the red.

Outright isolationist opposition to the foreign aid program will be insignificant. But, as in the case of aid to Greece and Turkey, and of the emergency relief bill last spring, and of the British credit in 1946, the opposition of the politicians who put budget and tax cutting ahead of all other considerations will be persistent.

Value of Finished U. S. Goods Hits 232 Billion for 3 Months

By the United Press

Rising prices shot the total value of service and finished goods to a new all-time annual rate in the July-August-September period, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

The "gross national product" soared to an annual rate of $232 billion in those months, from $229 billion in the previous three months.

But the rise was chiefly due to higher prices paid for the goods and services which make up the "gross national product," the department said. Business activity was about the same as in the previous quarter.

Personal spending rose to an annual rate of $166 billion from $162 billion, a new high. This increase accounted for most of the over-all rise, but it was offset by a drop in foreign trade of $2,800,000,000.

The net foreign trade balance—the difference between exports and imports—dropped from the second quarter high annual rate of $10,500,000,000 to $7,700,000,000 in the third quarter.

The department said that wage increases and the cashing of furlough bonds caused most of the rise in personal spending, and department economists said the gain was probably temporary and not the start of a new trend.

This spending rate was made possible by an increase in disposable income—income after taxes—of eight billion to $179 billion at an annual rate.

General Price Increase Laid to Foreign Demands

New York, Nov 16 (U.P.).—Foreign demand for American products has played an important part in the general price rise in this country, the National Association of Manufacturers said today.

The NAM report on foreign demand is the fifth, and final, one on the major factors underlying the price situation. The previous release covered money supply, food and Government policy, profit margins and wages and productivity.

China Voting This Week in First Election

Shanghai, Nov. 16 (AP).—China prepared today to hold its first general election in history this week and the average Chinese, while bewildered by it all, is sure of one thing—the Kuomintang will win.

Chiang Kai-shek's Kuomintang not only has the "grass roots" political machine which has been running things for 20 years, but a virtual monopoly of candidates.

At stake are 3044 seats in the national assembly, which will choose China's first constitutionally selected president and vice president. It is a safe guess that Chiang will keep on being president.

Taking No Chances

There are two minority parties, the Democratic Socialists and the Young China Party. While they control but a fraction of the vote, the Kuomintang is taking no chances when the three-day balloting begins Friday.

It required the two parties to submit lists of candidates. This is like compelling United States Republicans to submit their slate of nominees to the Democrats for approval, or vice versa.

The Democratic Socialists got pretty excited when the Kuomintang struck 70 of the Socialists' best candidates from the lists.

After delays and compromise, 30 of the names were restored, and if the voters have time to get acquainted with them, some of them might win.

Minority to Get Seats

It is safe to say the Kuomintang will have firm control in the assembly for the next six years, the terms for which delegates are elected.

The minority parties are assured some seats, because the Kuomintang has deliberately withdrawn its candidates from a few districts to make minority representation a certainty.

At least 35 prominent Kuomintang members withdrew at the request of Chiang Kai-shek, who declared the suppression of the Communists "is much more important than seeking nomination." Chiang himself refused to run from his native Fengchwa. Madame Chiang declined to run from Nanking.

The voters will be restricted to relatively few who have registered. The great mass of Chinese are regarding this first national election with typical Oriental wariness.

Those who are registered are perplexed by the lack of campaign issues and an ignorance of the backgrounds of candidates they are asked to vote for.

Six (Male) Residents of Greater Washington Area Express Dislike for New Look in Women's Fashions, Decreed by Paris

GENTLEMEN IN WASHINGTON PREFER LEGS to the "new look" styles, a street survey of masculine thought showed yesterday. Only one man of six queried said tolerantly, he was getting used to them

Camp

"I don't like the length of the new skirts and I don't like the idea of trying to change styles at a time like this," declared Henry Camp, 26, a GI student of 1713 Lamont st. nw.

Camp believes this is a particularly bad time to change the mode because of the high prices of clothes.

"Also, they should not use more material when there is a shortage," said Camp. "The new length is probably one reason why there are not enough men's suits."

Spraggins

"I don't think so much of the new styles, especially for younger women," said Julius Spraggins, 25, porter-driver of 1132 5th st. nw.

"I think the shorter skirts are more appropriate for the younger women, at least," Spraggins declared. "The new styles are probably all right for the older women."

However, the materials that are going into the longer skirts "should be used for other things," Spraggins said.

Stilling

"I guess it's just a matter of getting used to them," said Richard Stilling of 4511 S. Capitol st., resignedly.

Stilling, a student at the University of Maryland, said the new styles—the longer skirts, that is—looked silly to him at first. Now, however, he's more used to them and likes them better, he admitted.

He also agreed with a Washington preacher who said the new styles are immoral because they waste material.

Fenrich

"I don't like the long skirts because the new look looks too old fashioned to me," declared Ronald Fenrich, 19, of the United States Naval Hospital staff in Bethesda, Md.

"There's no sense in hiding a woman's leg after it took so long for women to get styles that are flattering," he added.

Fenrich agreed completely with the Washington preacher who said it was immoral to waste material that is badly needed for other things.

MacRae

"I approved of the old fashions and don't approve of the new fashions," said Donald MacRae, coal mine executive of the Sheraton Hotel.

"I don't think the looks of the new fashions are at all flattering to the girls," said he.

"It's a bad time to make the dresses longer anyway," MacRae declared, "because they have to use more materials and because prices are so high now."

Campbell

"I feel the new fashions are silly and should be kept in Paris, where they came from," declared Oren Campbell of Piney Point, Md.

Campbell, who is employed at the Navy torpedo testing range in Piney Point, said he and his wife, who agrees with him, spent all Saturday afternoon looking for a short-style coat

"It was funny to see women trying out the new look and falling all over themselves," said Campbell.

As to Old Clothes

Women residents of the Washington area were asked:

"Have you lengthened any of your last year's clothes?"

	All Women	Annual family income: Under $3000	$3000-$4999	$5000 and over
Yes	35%	29%	34%	42%
Has not, but intends to do so	16	13	17	16
No	49	58	49	42

Skirts show a definite downward trend with age, the older women favoring the longer lengths.

Women were asked:

"What length do you intend to wear your clothes this winter?"

	All Women	Age Groups: 21-29	30-44	45- over
Knee length	1%	3%	1%	%
Just below the knee	51	60	60	33
Mid-calf	41	32	33	58
Longer than mid-calf	4		4	7
Undecided	3	5	2	2

Although a Washington minister aroused a great deal of interest when he condemned the new styles as immoral because they waste material that is badly needed for other things, a majority of District residents do not agree with his use of the term "immoral." He received much wider approval among those who dislike the new fashions than among those who like them.

earners, together with those who pay their taxes in other ways, would voluntarily adapt such a provision to the practice of laying aside each payday for privately supported religious, educational and character-building agencies a share of their income," he said. "The problems confronting the conference would be quickly solved."

"I am firmly convinced, moreover," he added, "that such a systematic setting aside of income would contribute much to the moral fiber of every citizen thus participating, and through the service made possible by such voluntary contributions the welfare of the Nation would be greatly strengthened and advanced."

Dr. Robert M. Hopkins, executive director of the Stewardship Institute, said the conference would "concentrate the best thought and conviction" of outstanding leaders of the three major religious relief organizations on the "serious conditions existing in welfare and religious groups."

THE FACTS
behind United's withdrawal of
DC-6 FLIGHTS

THROUGHOUT its twenty-one years of operation, United Air Lines has always placed first emphasis upon the responsibility of earning and keeping the confidence of the public. United never has operated, and never will operate, any airplane which we do not believe to be safe.

Acting on the policy of safety first at all times—for the public and for its employees—United Air Lines has voluntarily withdrawn from service its 34 DC-6 aircraft until all possible fire hazards have been completely eliminated.

In the meantime, United will continue to maintain service over its entire nation-wide system with its fleet of 96 four-engined DC-4 and twin-engined DC-3 planes.

We have always believed it important to keep the public fully informed; and here are the facts about the temporary withdrawal of DC-6's:

After the accident at Bryce Canyon, steps were taken to correct conditions which examination and analysis showed to be potential sources of fire. Airline engineers sought and received approval of the C.A.B. to remove parachute flares. The C.A.A. requested the removal of certain insulation which was thought to represent a hazard. Upon the recommendation of airline engineers, the joint operation of cabin heaters and superchargers was discontinued to eliminate a potential difficulty.

Despite these precautions, a later fire experienced by another airline showed that a hazard still existed in this particular type of plane. But partly due to the corrective measures already taken, it was possible to land the airplane and extinguish the fire. Therefore, we are confident that its source will be identified without question, and the engineering staffs of United and other airlines, working with the manufacturer and with government experts, will concentrate on the solution to the problem.

During its 5,000,000 miles of flight operations in test and service by United alone, the DC-6 has demonstrated that it is inherently one of the finest planes ever built. We are confident it will inevitably establish a record of dependability as outstanding as other Douglas built planes.

When all work necessary to insure the complete operating safety and dependability of the DC-6 has been done, we will advise you, giving you the full facts.

Meanwhile schedules have been revised with our fleet of DC-4 and DC-3 planes to provide the traveling and shipping public in the 74 cities on our routes with as much service as we offered prior to inauguration of additional schedules with DC-6 planes six months ago. United's Cargoliners will continue operations as usual. No effort will be spared to serve the public as adequately and as efficiently as possible during the temporary withdrawal of the DC-6.

Sermons Reflect Congress Opening

Congregations in Greater Washington Hear Relief, World Affairs Stressed

Convening of Congress prompted discussion of religion and public affairs, including world relief, in sermons yesterday in Greater Washington churches.

Pastors of Catholic and Protestant churches reminded congregations of the "conservation days" observance, designated by the District Commissioners, and requested by representatives of three faiths. Synagogues held their observance Friday night.

Congregations also were urged to support the W-A-R-M (Washington Area Relief Mobilization) clothing campaign being conducted through November 16 by the Federation of Churches, the Washington Council of Church Women and the Jewish Community Council. Its headquarters are at St. John's Parish, 821 16th st. nw.

Catholic parishes, which are not participating in the W-A-R-M drive, next Sunday will join in a Nation-wide campaign for 25 million pounds of food for Europe and the Far East. It will be conducted by War Relief Services, official overseas relief agency of the Catholic Church, and will extend through November 30.

Young people of Seventh-Day Adventist churches have been canvassing the Takoma Park area since Friday night for Relief clothing. Trucks will pick up contributions today and deposit them temporarily at a depot on Greenwood ave., behind the Sligo Adventist Church at Flower and Carroll aves.

Church and Government

"It is not the business of the church to run the Government," Dr. Seth R. Brooks declared in his sermon, "but it is the business of the church to produce men who can run the best government."

Speaking at the Universalist National Memorial Church, 16th and S sts. nw., on "Religious Convictions and Public Affairs," Dr. Brooks declared:

Dr. Brooks

"I believe we have a right as religious people to judge the products of Hollywood, modern writing, labor and management, just as we have the right to judge the Marshall Plan, the investigations of un-American activities, food conservation, Government waste or inefficiency, but we must always judge them by Christian standards."

The Rev. Alfred Wesley Hurst, pastor of Cleveland Park Congregational Church, 34th and Lowell sts. nw., in a special prayer for Congress, asked that "we not hold our own problems so close to our eyes that we lose the far perspective of the world's need."

Democracy's Need

Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, pastor of the National Presbyterian Church, 18th and N sts. nw, told his congregation:

"The Christian Church does not depend upon democracy for survival; it will survive despite changes in political outlook. But democracy, as we conceive it, does depend on Christianity.

Dr. Elson

". . . Allow the Christian conception of systems which consider men to be languish, and we open the way to system which consider men to be robots, to be manipulated by political dictators or be mere ciphers in the mathematical computation of a state machine. That is why the police state, and democracy as cultivated under Christian faith are utterly incompatible, however much the word democracy may be used in totalitarian regimes."

Dr. Elson announced that invitations have been extended Presbyterians in Congress and to other Government officials to attend a service of communion and intercession today at 8 a. m. at the National Presbyterian Church. It will mark the opening of the special session.

Fr. Parson's Talk

The Rev. Wilfrid Parsons, S.J., of the Catholic University faculty, pictured "in the heart of this America of ours a great compassion for the suffering and bewildered world outside its boundaries."

Fr. Parson

Speaking on "Governments Are Not Enough," second in a series on "The Defenses of Peace," and heard over NBC's "Catholic Hour," Father Parsons said:

"Most of us in some way or other are cousins to that dislocated world, and its problems, its disagreements, its failures, are always in some way echoed over here. It can truly be said in all honesty and humility, that we in America have what the Holy Father calls 'a genuine recognition of human solidarity.' We have expressed that solidarity in the billions of dollars in goods we have sent to other nations in some form of relief since the ending of the war."

Bazaar in Arlington

The Woman's Auxiliary of Trinity Presbyterian Church will hold a bazaar, from 12 noon to 9 p. m., Saturday, in the cafeteria of the Claude Swanson, jr., High School, 5800 N. Washington blvd., Arlington. Mrs. Russell J. Gebhardt is general chairman.

Rev. Mr. Sedgwick Accepts Call to St. Thomas

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Acceptance of the pulpit of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church here was disclosed last night by the Rev. Harold Sedgwick, rector of All Saints' Church, Brookline, Mass.

Rev. Sedgwick

In a telephone conversation, Mr. Sedgwick said he announced his decision at the close of the morning service before 1000 parishioners. Also in the congregation, he said, was his aged father—Dr. Theodore Sedgwick of Sharon, Conn., retired rector of New York's famous Calvary Episcopal Church.

Mr. Sedgwick said he had written a letter to the St. Thomas' vestry (official board), accepting the new charge.

Stating that he would remain at All Saints' Church for the rest of 1947, and assume the local pulpit February 1, 1948, Mr. Sedgwick made a sermon plea for his people to "remain steadfast and loyal to the church."

Mr. Sedgwick, 39 and single, has been rector of All Saints' Church nine years. It has 1500 members. He was curate of Christ Episcopal Church, Cambridge, when its rector was Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, now rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, 16th and H sts. nw. He studied at Cambridge Theological Seminary in the late 1930's when the dean was Dr. Angus Dun, now Bishop of the Washington Episcopal Diocese.

The rector-elect of St. Thomas' Church is also a graduate of Phillips Exeter Academy and Harvard University. He is a nephew of Ellery Sedgwick of Boston, former editor of the Atlantic Monthly.

At St. Thomas' 18th and Church sts. nw., he will succeed Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson, who retired from the ministry September 1. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt was a vestryman at St. Thomas' when Assistant Secretary of the Navy in World War I and an honorary warden while in the White House.

ROADMASTER is the name—18 feet of lively size, comfort and fine finish. Powered by a 144 h.p. Fireball straight-eight, it gives you flashing performance rarely to be found in a car of such size, room and superlatively fine interior finish. White sidewall tires, as illustrated, available at extra cost.

How to be Smart — and Show it

THOSE who drive them, and so should know, will tell you straight out that there is no smarter buy you can make than a Buick Roadmaster.

On the road, they say, there's just nothing to touch the lift and life in its big 144 h.p. Fireball straight-eight power plant.

In town, they find it a dream come true—quick on the green lights, uncomplaining and smooth when traffic crawls, the easiest parking eighteen-footer they ever laid hands on.

For finish and appointments, they declare, it doffs its cap to no one—and where else, they ask you, can you find style that's smarter, more distinguished, more surely a foretaste of the best that's to come?

So, they reason, you mark yourself as a smart investor when you make your highway appearance in a Roadmaster.

You mark yourself as one alert not only to what's fresh-looking and fashion-worthy but to what's fine beyond tradition's standards in finish and ride, handling and lively action.

Why not see a Buick dealer now, with or without a car to trade, and make sure your future holds something truly fine to see—and even finer to own?

ONLY BUICK HAS ALL THESE STAR FEATURES

Wiley Scores Offices' Return

By the United Press

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), yesterday renewed his appeal to end the concentration of Government in Washington as a safeguard against a possible future atomic blitz.

In a letter to Defense Secretary James Forrestal, he said Russia had decentralized her government "to a tremendous extent" and offered "a far less vulnerable central target in Moscow than we do here in Washington."

Wiley, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, has repeatedly called on the Government to spread its activities out over the country so the Nation's nerve center cannot be wiped out by one well-placed atom bomb.

"The terrible possibility of an atomic bomb smashing the District of Columbia and with one blow wiping out our entire central military establishment, as well as vital civilian agencies, has caused me to take steps for decentralization of the Capital," he wrote.

He told Forrestal, however, that, despite his effort in that direction, "the trend seems exactly in the reverse direction."

Five Taken to Hospital

Four women and a child were taken from the Kadimah to a Haifa hospital and eight of their relatives were allowed ashore in Palestine with them.

British warships and police boats rushed to the area after the discovery of the Aliyah. When police boarded the grounded vessel "they found a number of United States Army uniforms and tins of food in United States containers," an official report said.

The Tel Aviv post office was robbed today by a band of masked men who were reported to have stolen "many thousands of pounds worth of cut diamonds."

U. S.-Soviet Palestine Accord Held Skin-Deep

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Dr. Charles Malik, Lebanese delegate to the United Nations, launched a bitter attack on the Palestine partition proposal today and described Soviet-American agreement on the plan for dividing the Holy Land into separate Arab and Jewish countries as being "only skin deep."

"If they really agree, the Arab diplomat said in a radio forum (ABC) in which Mrs. Franklin D. Rosevelt acted as moderator, "why haven't they produced the plan of partition by now, when they are 20 days overdue in submitting it?"

Malik said: "In the light of the radical disagreement on every fundamental issue between the United States and the Soviet Union, their agreement on the general principle of partition is only skin deep."

Malik indicated that he considered U. S. support of partition as being contradictory to the aims of the Marshall Plan. Declaring there are "more Communists among the Jews in Little Palestine today than in all the countries of the Near East put together," he added that "already thousands of so-called refugees are flocking in Black Sea ports in order to shoot to Palestine as soon as the lid is lifted."

The Arab spokesman added: "I take it that the United States is interested in the security of Greece, Turkey and Iran. I take it also that the Marshall Plan aims at the containment of communism. But if thousands of Russian and eastern European Jews—and who can tell who is a Jew and who is not a Jew?—have free access to Palestine, is the American government certain Greece and Turkey and Iran will still be secure and communism will still be contained?"

for "98 per cent, plus" of ingot-producing capacity.

In both the original and the amended actions one of the chief commission complaints is against the industry's use of basing points in its selling methods. This practice is to base freight charges on certain cities, even though the steel may not be produced in the city from which freight is charged.

Equal Opportunities Held Denied

In this connection the new complaint states that the producers have acted to prevent deviations from their announced prices by "taking collective action to curtail price quotations on an f.o.b. mill basis when unrelated to or calculated in accordance with their basing point practices . . ."

As a result, the commission contends, buyers are deprived of equal opportunities to obtain steel in times of scarcity when producers refuse to quote and sell f.o.b. mill.

When a customer buys f.o.b. mill he pays the cost of the article, plus the actual freight charges from where the article is made.

The commission's announcement described as follows the commission's contentions that the West Coast is discriminated against:

"To customers in Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming each respondent producer quotes prices arrived at through application of basing point practices and in so doing quotes prices as though shipments were being made from mills east of the Rocky Mountains, although deliveries actually are made from mills west of the Rockies and in some instances near the location of the customer's business.

Regarding the facilities section of the new complaint, the commission accuses the companies of having agreed at institute meetings "that it would be to their self-interest to so act as to forestall increases in steel production facilities."

EUROPE NEEDS RELIEF from immediate hunger
AMERICANS NEED RELIEF from runaway prices

A Program for the Special Session of the 80th Congress

The world economy cannot be stabilized without a stable U. S. economy.

The American economy cannot be stabilized without rehabilitation of the world economy.

The two problems are one and inseparable.

Top priority in the Special Session of Congress must go to:

(1) Restoration of controls to ensure a fair distribution of food and essentials, and to forestall runaway inflation and depression.

(2) A bold program to meet the needs of a war-devastated world, which means (a) immediate emergency relief (b) a world-wide rehabilitation program.

To secure (1) we advocate:

a: Price controls on essential commodities.

b: Rationing of essential foods.

c: Overall planning, including allocation of raw materials to insure maximum production of essentials.

To secure (2) we advocate:

a: In the initial emergency stages, the United States must appropriate sufficient funds to finance relief shipments. Relief distribution should be governed by the following principles:

1: Relief should go to all nations in need. Eastern and Western Europe cannot and must not be divided economically without disastrous effects on their economies and ours.

2: Each nation receiving aid shall be free from interference in internal affairs.

3: Priority should go to the nations which suffered most at the hands of Fascism.

b: For long-range, world-wide rehabilitation, without which world recovery is impossible, the Congress should authorize U. S. participation in a UN World Reconstruction Fund, to be established at the earliest possible date and to be administered by machinery similar to that of UNRRA. As a necessary part of such a plan, the Ruhr should be internationalized immediately under UN administration, with its industrial potential harnessed for the benefit of all the European peoples.

The most effective international agency since the war's end was UNRRA. Only through UN can we be assured that aid will not intensify international rivalries, and split Europe into suicidal economic blocs.

Peace and world-wide prosperity are indivisible. Peace and a global, non-political approach to international relief and rehabilitation are indivisible. A limited relief program confined to the short-range perspective of power politics will lose the fight for peace.

Skins Still Skidding; Lowly Lions Lace Them, 38-21

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Bud De Groot, the old Redskins' coach who switched to Los Angeles because it was smoother, walked out of Yankee Stadium at dusk today, at the rear of his vanquished Los Angeles Dons, quite unhappy about recent events that included a 16-13 defeat for his athletes.

POVICH

"They're not a football team, they're a two-man gang," piped up one of De Groot's aides. "You cover Spec Sanders and get murdered by Buddy Young, or vice versa. All you can do when playing the Yankees is name your own bad medicine."

Certainly the Sanders-Young combine is the slickest two-man operation in football this season. There's doubt that Army's famed Blanchard-Davis pair of the last three years was any more effective. Yankee Coach Ray Flaherty owns the most devastating two-edge weapon in the business.

Mr. Thunder and Mr. Lightning they call them in New York. Sanders is the heavy-duty guy with his bruising gallops, with Young a 170-pound will-o'-the-wisp. He flits more than he runs.

SANDERS WAS a tremendous football player last year, but not until Young joined the Yankees this season from Illinois' Rose Bowl champions did the big Texan reach full flower as the league's leading ground gainer. With the threat of Young as a decoy, Sanders' efficiency leaped. In New York they say that every time Sanders takes a bow in public he ought to raise Young to his shoulders.

Flaherty is making full use of the threat of Young's speed, even as did Frank Leahy when Leahy had him in the All-Stars' lineup against the Bears at Chicago last August. When Young went out to a flank, the Bears put two men on him, and George Ratterman neatly passed to John Zilly on the other side of the line for a touchdown.

Flaherty's tribute to Sanders is the ultimate one. "I waited 10 years for another Cliff Battles," he says "and I got him. They run alike, they act alike and they think alike. I don't want to call Sanders a better football player than Battles, but he's in the same class. He's a great back without Buddy Young. With Young, he's super."

SANDERS BURST upon the pro football scene last year quite unheralded. Down at Texas University he was never more than a second string back before the war, and on the Navy teams for which he played he was quite undistinguished. But Flaherty claimed him as his second choice in the draft, nevertheless, and today Sanders broke Beattie Feathers' record for ground gained in a single season.

The Yankees' special objective is coming up two weeks hence. That's the day they play the Cleveland Browns in Yankee Stadium. The Yankees are comfortably out in front of the Eastern division, but they're not quite content about it. They have never beaten the Browns in four tries at it since the All-America Conference was born.

They'll fill Yankee Stadium's 70,000 seats for that game, unless the weather is bad. Already 33,000 tickets have been sold, a greater advance sale than the baseball Yankees ever made for any game. It promises to be pro football's game of the year. The Cleveland club will probably be the favorite.

THE YANKEES thought they were on their way to their first victory over Cleveland last year when they went into the final quarter leading, 9 to 7. But Otto Graham pitched a touchdown pass to Dante Lavelli, and it was the same old story—the Yanks lost to the Browns.

Out in Cleveland they don't agree that Sanders is a better football player than their man, Graham, and perhaps it is a tight fit. The obdurate Cleveland people won't even concede that Buddy Young will be the best colored player on the field. They think they have the finest colored back in big Marion Motley. If Motley can't run the ends like Young, then neither can Young tear up a line like Motley.

Graham got in the hair of the Yankees again this season. The Yanks were battling the Browns to a 17-17 deadlock last month in the third quarter and then it happened again—a Graham pass for a touchdown, and the Yanks lost. Somehow, Cleveland refuses to be impressed with the Sanders-Young combine, no matter what I say.

Steelers Get 3 Scores in 108 Seconds, Win, 24 to 7

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 16 (AP).—The Steelers scored three touchdowns in a minute and 48 seconds of the last period today to come from behind and defeat the New York Giants, 24-7, before 35,000 frenzied fans and thus retain their slim lead in the National Football League's Eastern Division.

Tony Compagno bulled over for the first of the three scores with 3 minutes and 29 seconds left.

A stunning upset was in the making as the Giants went ahead, 7-3, with a third-period touchdown and clung grimly to their lead as the game moved into the closing minutes. But a magnificent punt by Bob Cifers which rolled out on the Giant 2, opened the scoring flood gates for the Steelers.

Frank Reagan's return boot rolled dead on the New York 35.

Johnny Clement and Compagno, aided by some tremendous blocking, marched in five plays to the New York 4 from where Compagno crashed through for the winning touchdown.

After the kickoff, Paul White intercepted a desperate pass by Paul Governali on the Giant 28 and ran it back to the New York nine. On the second play, Compagno spun through right guard for a score but the Steelers were detected holding and penalized to the 19. Clement then hit End Val Jansante for a touchdown pass

Another Governali pass exploded into a third Steeler score as Charley Seabright intercepted the heave on the New York 33 and raced diagonally into the end zone.

Paschka Goes Over

Joe Glamp, Steeler kicking specialist, booted all three extra points and a first period field goal from the Giant 12 which put Pittsburgh in front until New York made its third period bid.

The Giants capitalized on an interception on the first sequence of downs after the second half kickoff to score. Fast charging linemen partially deflected a Clement pass and big Jim White grabbed the ball on the Pittsburgh 35, running to the 19.

Governali hit Howard Livingston with a pass good for 17 yards and a first down on the Steelers 2. Gordon Paschka, a Giant farm hand from Jersey City, cracked over on the third try and old Ken Strong booted the extra point.

LeForce's Play Knocks Washington Out of Race

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Detroit, Nov. 16.—As the game-ending gun went off the Washington Redskins blasted into scoring territory here today, but 17,003 paying customers at Briggs Stadium took the effort with amazing unconcern.

The catch was that the Redskins were merely cutting their final deficit to 38-21 and their opponents, Detroit's last-place Lions in the Western Division of the National Football League, were coasting to victory in a game they'd locked up in the second quarter.

In spite of their last-second touchdown the Redskins were pretty sad. They lost even a mathematical chance of winning the Eastern Division crown with their largest aggregation of mistakes this season and to a Detroit team that had Clyde LeForce.

LeForce Big Wheel

LeForce did everything to the Redskins they overlooked doing to themselves. He passed to three touchdowns, for distances of 47, 75 and 11 yards.

He set up the Lions other two scores with his 15 completions in 24 attempts and he turned in an all-around job of quarterbacking the hosts in their third triumph in nine games.

Of course there was Bullet Bill Dudley, who managed for one touchdown, and such pass receivers as Joe Watt (he caught two touchdown passes) and Kelly Mote (he grabbed one).

There was also the local boy, Elmer Madarik, who plowed over the 4-yard stripe, and former Redskin Roy Zimmerman who kicked five straight extra points and a second-period field goal.

But mostly it was LeForce, the rookie from Tulsa University. While Washington's Sammy Baugh was completing 20 of 31 passes, including some of the wildest the slinger has ever thrown, LeForce was accounting for the Redskins' fifth straight setback and sixth in eight games this season by making the most of every break.

Washington had the game tied up in the first quarter, 7-7, but went behind before the period was over and stayed there.

Detroit boosted its first-period 14-7 lead to 24-7 at intermission and 31-7 going into the final quarter.

Washington's only consolation was that it outscored the Lions in the final quarter, 14-7.

Another former Redskin, Halfback Bob DeFruiter, put the Washington representatives in a hole before the game was a minute old. Bob snared Baugh's first pass of the game, ran it from midfield to the Redskin 43, and from there the hosts drove to a score.

Mote Tallies on Pass

They actually did little driving for six plays, since a 15-yard holding penalty set them back, but with the ball back on Washington's 47 they did all their driving in one play.

LeForce dropped a flat pass in the arms of Mote, the former Duke great, as he hid behind a screen of Lions at midfield.

When he'd run out of blockers at the 10-yard stripe the Redskins helped with missed tackles on the part of Eddie Saenz from the side and Dick Todd from behind.

Two minutes later the Redskins had tied it up. A weak kickoff was moved back to the 39 and it took six plays before Bob Nussbaumer sneaked behind Weise and Cooke

Cards Win Out, 21-20

Chicago, Nov. 16 (AP).—Off form for three quarters while Green Bay compiled a 20-7 lead, Paul Christman clicked with his passes in the final period today to herd the Chicago Cardinals to a 21-20 National Football League triumph over the rugged Packers before a crowd of 40,086 in Comiskey Park.

The Packers stole three of Christman's tosses, turning two of them into touchdowns. Big Ted Fritsch booted 35 and 43 yard field goals to keep Green Bay well ahead until the last quarter.

Christman Makes It Up

Christman, leading the Cardinals to their seventh league victory in eight starts, finally made up for his lapses by pitching 19 yards to Bill DeCorrevont to set a 57-yard scoring drive in motion at the outset of the final period. Elmer Angsman banged 11 yards during the march which Pat Harder capped by squirming over from the 4.

The first time the Cards got the ball after the next kickoff, they drove 58 yards for the clincher. Angsman smashed the line for 18, Christman hit Mal Kutner for 19 and then again speared Kutner for 23 and the tally.

Harder, who place-kicked all three extra points, drilled the Packer line for two good gains in the Cardinals' 61-yard push for their first score in the opening period. Christman tossed 15 to Bill Dewell and capped the parade with a 20-yard touchdown heave to Kutner.

Interception Sets Up Score

Firtsch's interception of Christman's pass set up the Packers' first touchdown after one play of the second period. Jack Jacobs tossed 25 yards to Nolan Luhn, then Fritsch bulled over from the

Cleveland Takes Western Crown By Romping Over San Francisco

Cleveland, Nov. 16 (AP).—Otto Graham hurled three touchdown passes today as the explosive Cleveland Browns smothered the San Francisco Forty-Niners, 37 to 14, to annex their second straight Western Division championship in the All-America Football Conference.

The 76,504 who viewed the Browns' final home game boosted the season's home attendance to 392,760.

The Browns rebounded from last Sunday's 13 to 12 squeeze over Brooklyn with a vengeance, notching at least one touchdown in each quarter.

Graham heaved all three of his scoring passes to End Dante Lavelli to bring his total of touchdown aerials for the season to 18, a new conference record. Graham, Glenn Dobbs of the Dons, and George Ratherman of the Bills had been tied at 17.

Cleveland jumped ahead early in the opening quarter when huge Chet Adams, subbing for injured Lou Groza, booted a 44-yard field goal.

An alert Cleveland defense broke up a retaliating Forty-niners' thrust on the Cleveland 43 when Weldon Humble recovered Frankie Albert's fumble. The Browns then moved down the field with Graham pitching his first touchdown to Lavelli on a 23-yard play.

The Forty-Niners fought back 73 yards to the Cleveland 8 but were frustrated again by Norm Stand-

Bears Stop Rams, 41-21

Los Angeles, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Chicago Bears, rolling relentlessly in quest of another National Football League title, subdued the Los Angeles Rams today, 41-21, in a viciously fought game from which five players were ejected.

Steady Sid Luckman, steering the rugged Bear machine through rough shoals, pitched three touchdown passes and set up a fourth with his sharpshooting. Alert ball hawking by his mates kept the Rams from getting back into the game after Jim Hardy suddenly began finding the passing range for Los Angeles in the last half.

It was the seventh straight win for the comebacking Bears and it was a torrid one. To keep matters under control, officers found it necessary to put out three Bear ends—El Smith, Ed Sprinkle and Ed Cifers—while ejecting Backs Mel Bleeker and Dante Magnani of the Rams for "unsportsmanlike conduct."

Luckman's three scoring flips were for 9 and 17 yards to Jim Keane and for 26 yards to Ken Kavanaugh. Luckman-to-Keane passes of 15 and 20 yards set up the pins for a line-drive score by Hugh Gallarneau from the 1.

The Bears, leading, 20 to 7, in the third quarter, suddenly found themselves blitzed by an aerial bombardment by Hardy, Ram sub quarter. Hardy threw 32 yards to Jim Benton to bring the Rams within six points of the Chicagoans.

The Bears bounced back with three scores in the fourth period, however, to clinch the games. George Guylanics broke through the middle of a 45-yard scoring

Eagles Rout Yanks, 32-0

Philadelphia, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Philadelphia Eagles, displaying superiority on both the ground and in the air, took advantage of fumbles, blocked kicks and a dozen penalties to crush the Boston Yanks, 32 to 0, today in a National Football League game before 27,323.

A blocked kick—one of four by charging Eagle linemen—set the action for Philadelphia's initial score. Tackle Al Wistert fell on a punt on Boston's 1-yard line and fleet Steve Van Buren swept end for the TD.

Thompson Tosses Score

Three minutes later Thompson flipped 54 yards to End Jack Ferrante for another six-pointer.

Boston threatened when Boley Dancewicz pitched a 36-yard strike to End Harold Crisler that put the Yanks on the Eagle 45. The Yanks, incidentally, were able to penetrate Eagle territory only once more during the game—a 39 yard pass and lateral play reaching the 41.

In the second quarter, Pat McHugh raced 40 yards to the Yank 14 after a Boston punt was partially blocked, then Thompson tossed straight down the middle to Ferrante for the Eagle's third touchdown.

Van Buren Again

In the second half, a Boston fumble was recovered on the 17 and two plays later Van Buren snaked through center for six points.

The final score came on a six-yard aerial from Bill Mackrides to Armstrong. The play was set up by a beautiful 47-yard punt return by Fullback Ernie Steele—longest gallop of the day.

Joe Domnanovoich, Yanks center star, was hurt on the tenth play of the game and was carried from the field. At Temple University Hospital a physician said Domnanovoich received a sprained neck. X-rays disclosed no fracture and the physician said the players condition was not serious.

Santa Clara Rips St. Mary's

San Francisco, Nov. 16 (AP).—Scoring three touchdowns in the first six minutes of the game and outplaying their ancient rivals all the way, Santa Clara's Broncos defeated the St. Mary's Gaels, 33 to 9, in their annual football game here today before about 40,000 fans.

The Broncos, who went into the game as mild shortenders, dominated the contest almost throughout. The spectators had hardly settled in their seats when Quarterback Al Martin returned the opening kickoff 94 yards for the first Santa Clara touchdown.

St. Mary's, with its outstanding Halfback Herman Wedemeyer a marked man and bottled up much of the time by the alert Santa Clarens, scored an automatic safety in the first period and a touchdown in the second quarter.

Santa Clara's line outcharged the Gaels and caused them to fumble three times, each time leading to a Bronco touchdown. St. Mary's passers were unable to hit their marks due to the extreme pressure put on them by the smashing Santa Clara forwards.

Michigan Grabs Top Rung In Nation as Irish Falter

New York, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Michigan's walloping Wolverines romped to the head of the college football class today on the strength of a rousing triumph over Wisconsin which clinched the Western Conference crown and ticketed the boys from Ann Arbor for the Rose Bowl.

Michigan steam-rollered the Badgers, 40 to 6, to take over the top rung as Notre Dame, its chief rival for mythical national honors, was extended to the limit in driving past Northwestern, 26 to 19.

Chief casualties of the weekend were Georgia Tech and Utah, bounced out of the undefeated and untied ranks. Tech toppled before Alabama, 14 to 7, and Idaho subdued the Utes, 13 to 6. Pennsylvania meanwhile came from behind to tie Army, 7 to 7, as it dropped off the perfect record list. That left only four major clubs with unsullied performance charts.

Midwest—Michigan and Notre Dame.

Southwest—Southern Methodist.

East—Penn State.

Southern Methodist had its hands full in squeezing past Arkansas, 14 to 6, as Penn State startled the experts with the ease of its 20-to-7 triumph over Navy, in what had been expected to be a close contest. On the West Coast, Southern Cal was idle in preparation for its Rose Bowl showdown with UCLA.

Iowa Stops Minnesota

As Michigan romped home in the Big Nine, Iowa turned in one of the many upsets of the day by downing Minnesota, 13 to 7, while Illinois conquered Ohio State, 28 to 7.

Other upset victims were Yale, Missouri, Brown, Colgate, Wake Forest and Oregon State.

Yale, a six-point favorite, was the victim of a 17-to-0 Princeton shutout. Missouri, surprise conquerer of Duke, was a 12-point choice against Oklahoma but was knocked out of the Big Six lead, 21-12. Harvard ignored the fact that it was a 7½-point underdog to top Brown, 13-7; Syracuse, rated 6½ underneath, edged Colgate, 7-0; North Carolina State, picked to lose by 7½, bounced Wake Forest, 20-0, and Washington State ignored the same underdog odds to nose out Oregon State, 14-13.

In the Midwest, Indiana and Purdue both stepped outside the Big Nine for impressive wins, the Hoosiers blasting Marquette, 48-6, and Purdue defeating Pitt, 28-0. As Missouri was knocked out of the Big Six lead, Iowa State kept Kansas State flattened, 14-0, and outside Kansas bested Oklahoma A. & M., 13-7.

Waterfield May Have Broken Jaw

Los Angeles, Nov. 16 (AP).—The hectic Chicago Bears-Los Angeles Rams game, which saw five players ejected today and resulted in a possible broken jaw for Bob Waterfield, Ram ace, was capped by a dressing room fight involving Bear End Jack Matheson and Ram Coaches Bob Snyder and George Trafton.

The fracas started, observers said, when Matheson tried to take a football away from Buddy Leininger, Ram equipment boy, as the squads left the field. Matheson contended it was the game ball, but Leininger insisted it was a practice ball. The player swung.

Trafton, a formed heavyweight boxer, and Snyder remonstrated with Matheson, but the Bear player followed them down the runway into the Rams' dressing room. There witnesses reported, Snyder landed a solid right to Matheson's jaw, as players from both squads milled at the door.

Snyder — himself a former Bear as is Trafton — then charged that Ed Springle had socked Waterfield in the jaw in the second quarter. X-rays were to be taken tonight to determine the extent of Waterfield's injury.

Sprinkle was one of three Bears, all ends, dismissed from the rough game by officials for unsportsmanlike conduct. His ejection came after an exchange of blows with Dante Magnani. Magnani also left.

After the post-game squabble subsided, Clyde (Bulldog) Turner, captain-center of the Bears, himself a storm center during the contest, came into the Rams' quarters and apologized for Matheson's actions.

"We'll take care of Matheson ourselves," said the 235-pound Turner.

Central-Tech Interhigh Playoff Nov. 28 Also Renews District's Oldest Rivalry

WHEN CENTRAL'S VIKINGS and McKinley Tech's Trainers trot onto the Griffith Stadium field the night of November 28 to play for the interhigh championship under sponsorship of the Board of Education and The Washington Post, they'll also be celebrating the forty-fifth anniversary of their gridiron rivalry.

This oldest of Washington's high school rivalries, which began in 1902, has been uninterrupted with the exception of 1918 when the series was suspended because of the influenza epidemic.

Yet, after all these years, the schools stand almost even. The teams met twice during the 1911 and 1942 seasons. Central has won 20 to Tech's 19, and seven of the games have resulted in ties. Tech, however, has the edge in points score, 372-322.

Seeing Central and Tech play off for the championship is not a new sight to longtime interhigh fans. Until 1937, with few exceptions, the Central-Tech fracas decided the title.

Then, the new schools, first Wilson and then Anacostia and Coolidge, joined the old standbys, Central, Tech, Eastern, Western and Roosevelt, to swell the league to eight teams. The wider distribution of talent so weakened the Central and Tech dynasties as to give the title to Western in 1939 and '40, Coolidge in 1943 and '46 and Eastern in 1944 and '45.

Central and Tech will be hot after that championship. The crown hasn't been Central's in five years. The last time Tech won it was 10 years ago.

Tech, the favorite, has perhaps the greater incentive. The Trainers got to the championship game last year, only to be beaten, 18-6, by Coolidge.

Eight regulars from that 1946 Tech team are back. They remember how close they came to winning last year, and too, how, when they were favored to swamp the little Central team, the Vikings held them to a 0-0 tie.

The powerhouse Tech team has the unique distinction of not only an undefeated and united interhigh record, but also of having held all its opponents scoreless. No team has come within 19 points of tying the Trainers, who have tallied 153 points or an average of 25.5 points per game.

Central, in winning all six of its interhigh clashes, held three of its opponents scoreless, permitting only Wilson to net 12 points. Central won that one, 31-12. The Vikings have scored 104 points to 25 for their foes.

Two Colmer Touchdowns Beat Colts

Brooklyn, Nov. 16 (AP).—Mickey Colmer cracked over for two touchdowns today to lead the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 21-14 All-American Football Conference victory over the Baltimore Colts before 9604 Ebbets Field customers.

With Colmer and Bob (Hunchy) Hoernschemeyer grinding out yardage along the ground, the Dodgers left the Colts sole tenants of the Eastern Division cellar despite some brilliant passing by Bud Schwenk.

Schwenk, whose all-time collegiate passing record was surpassed yesterday by Mississippi's Mickey Conerly, completed 13 of 26 tosses to set two All-America standards. The former Washington University (St. Louis) ace now has completed 147 and thrown 280 this season, eclipsing the marks set by Glenn Dobbs last year when the latter completed 134 of 273.

After a scoreless first period, the Dodgers struck at 7:26 of the second, Colmar crashing over from the 4 to culminate a 41-yard drive. The Dodger fullback carried five times in a row to complete the big push.

A Schwenk-Andy Dudish pass play, good for 69 yards, put the Colts back in the ball game at 9:57 of the period. When Augie Lion knicked the extra point, just as Phil Martinovinch did for the Brooks, it was tied 7-7.

Hoesnschemeyer raced 28 yards after faking a pass to send the home club ahead to stay at 9:17 of the third quarter. And Colmer crunched over from the midway in the fourth period after Saxon Judd blocked John Galvin's punt and Tex Warrington recovered on the Baltimore 11. For the third time Martinovice converted.

Baltimore struck through the air for a "mean nothing" touchdown as time ran out. Schwenk tossed to Bill Hillenbrand, for a 60-yard gain down to the Dodgers 11 and then the prize pitcher threw to Hub Bechtol in the end zone as the final gun was shot. Lio kicked the point.

Federation Ruling

Va. Schools Must Trim Court Slates

THE VIRGINIA PUBLIC high schools, which become members of the National Federation of High Schools on January 1, have been told by that organization to modify their policy of playing long, drawn-out basketball schedules.

The order particularly affects George Washington of Alexandria, Washington-Lee of Arlington and Fairfax, which have in past years, played as many as 26 games. They also competed in as many as five tournaments.

Under National Federation regulations, each team is permitted to play only four games before Christmas and 16 after.

In addition to the State tournament, each will be allowed two outside tournaments. Which means that the two annual Christmas tournaments held at Fairfax and Harrisonburg will probably fold up. The Harrisonburg tourney was won by G.W. last year.

Winner of the State crown or the top northern Virginia team will therefore be eligible to compete in the Metropolitan Washington and Duke-Durham, N. C., tourneys, if the latter gets a nod of approval from the federation.

Last year's Virginia championship team from G. W. is favored to repeat with three regulars back from the 1946-47 quintet. (They are Billy Rorer, Buzzy Brown and Jake Dohner). There are several promising six-footers among the rookies to add height of the team that was one of the smallest in the State last season.

WITH THE CLOSE of the local schoolboy football season still three weeks away, two of Washington's undefeated schools have excellent chances of playing in postseason bowl games. The schools are St. John's and Bullis Prep, and officials of both have stated that they would be receptive to bids.

St. John's, unbeaten in seven games, wants to play in the December 26 Catholic Youth Organization's bowl game in New Orleans according to Brother F. Andrew, the school's athletic director. Last year, Gonzaga was invited and lost, 19-0, to Jesuit High, champion of Louisiana.

Headmaster Al Grossman of Bullis has been in contact with officials of the Orange Bowl scholastic football game committee, which sponsors a contest at Christmas.

The Bullis team, with one of the greatest records ever compiled by a Washington area school, has also had feelers from a Seattle, Wash., group that wants to sponsor a national prep school "championship" game.

Sanders Sets Mark As Yankees Win, 16-13

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Spec Sanders, New York halfback established a pro rushing record today as the Yankees defeated the Los Angeles Dons 16-13 in an All-America Conference football game.

Not only did Sanders wipe out the rushing record set by Beattie Feathers of the Chicago Bears in 1934 but he pitched both the New York touchdown passes and probably saved the victory when he went back to his own goal and tossed to Jack Russell, who lugged the ball some 60 yards out of danger shortly before the gun.

During the afternoon Sanders gained 319 yards by running and passing for the Yankees and the 159 yards he picked up along the ground raised his total for 11 games to 1093. Feathers had piled up 1004 also in 11 games.

The Yankees, apparently dreaming of their coming clash with Cleveland awoke just often enough to win. They threatened constantly in the opening period and finally got two points when Glenn Dobbs' punt was blocked and the ball squirted through the end zone.

That was all until the midway in the second when Sanders lofted one to Eddie Prokop for 40 yards and the first touchdown. However, Los Angeles led as the teams reached the half, the visitors' touchdown coming on Dobbs' 69-yard dash after picking up Sanders' fumble. Just before the gun Ben Agajanian booted a field goal.

Another Dobbs' punt was partly blocked in the third and that set up the Yankees' winning touchdown. They took over on the Don's 46 and on the third play Sanders tossed to Buddy Young from 33 yards out. The former Illini speedster squirmed the final 25 yards as the 37,625 paying customers cheered.

Agajanian got another field goal then to make it 16 to 13 but missed one late in the fourth period that would have given his club a tie.

Bill Bennings

DEAR FOLKS: At Bowie.

Jockey Bobby Bernhardt, one of my favorite pilots, arrived from New England and will do some riding next week. Jimmy Baird is here. He has come a long way in the saddle and is now the Nation's second leading rider in the number of winners, being topped only by Steve Brooks. Baird has gotten home in front 204 times to date and if he gets hot at Charles Town, he may overtake Brooks. Baird, because of friendship for several owners and trainers, prefers to ride on the smaller tracks although he admits his big ambition is to pilot a Kentucky Derby winner. Officials and the mutuel department should get together. Wasn't the betting shut down during the long delay at the post before the second race last Saturday? Alan Clarke, who deserves a good horse after the may overtake Brooke. Baird, Walter Haight, seems to have one in Fritz Maisel. The colt has won two out of three and is a chip off the old block—his sire, Little Beans. Bowie has plenty of horseflesh around this fall. For the Monday program limit fields were named in seven of the eight races. Lest we forget, be careful around those stables, fellows. Don't let's have a fire this year. See you on the rail.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—Showdown week arrived today in the Southern Conference.

For Saturday afternoon at Durham, N. C., Duke's Blue Devils, who continued today to lead the league race despite yesterday's surprise 0-0 battle with South Carolina's Tar Heels in the circuit's biggest family fuss of the current campaign.

A capacity crowd of more than 56,500 customers will jam Duke's spacious horseshoe for the struggle between the two neighborhood rivals of long standing.

If Duke wins, the Blue Devils, perhaps not the clever, powerful gridmen of pre-war days but still a hard-fighting, scrappy foot-ball club when the stakes are high, will rack up another conference championship for Coach Wallace Wade.

Should North Carolina triumph —and the Tar Heels undoubtedly will be favored—the boys coached by crafty Carl Snavely won't get anything, in all probability, out of their accomplishment except a lot of satisfaction.

A Carolina victory likely would hand the 1947 league crown to William and Mary's Indians, a team the Tar Heels edged early in the season, 13-7. William and Mary, which ran roughshod over Washington and Lee in the mud at Roanoke, Va., yesterday, 45-6, rested in second place with six triumphs in seven loop contests.

Of course, William and Mary would need to beat the University of Richmond in their traditional Thanksgiving Day game at Richmond to sew up the bunting for positive, but that task should be only a formality for the Spiders have won only three in nine outings.

William and Mary takes time out from conference play for the second time this season Saturday afternoon to entertain an "outsider"—State University of Bowling Green, Ohio, in a test at Williamsburg, Va.

In addition to the Duke-North Carolina fray, only one other contest involving conference foes will be played this week, this being a tilt between Davidson and The Citadel at Charleston, S. C., which will have no bearing on deciding the flag winner.

The top battle outside the Southern loop will bring together Virginia's once-defeated Cavaliers and North Carolina State's unpredictable Wolfpack at Charlottesville, Va. Virginia had a tough time squeezing by West Virginia, 6-0, over the weekend, while State turned in one of the Nation's biggest upsets by thrashing Wake Forest, 20-0.

In other weekend encounters, The Citadel won its first conference game of the year by edging Virginia Military Institute, 7-6; North Carolina took advantage of three Maryland mistakes in the final period to whip the Terps, 19-0; Virginia Tech won its third game in a row by dropping the University of Richmond, 26-14; Wayne University saw to it that George Washington's record of not having tasted victory this season remained intact, beating the Colonials, 7-6, and Clemson thrashed Duquesne, 34-13. Furman and Davidson were not scheduled.

Schedule for the week:

SATURDAY AFTERNOON—North Carolina at Duke, Davidson at The Citadel, North Carolina State at Virginia, Maryland at Vanderbilt, Auburn at Clemson, Washington and Lee at Delaware, Furman at Georgia Tech, State University of Bowling Green, Ohio, at William and Mary, Georgetown at George Washington.

Tatum Skips Mud as Alibi In 19-0 Loss

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

WELL, MARYLAND couldn't bag the big one Saturday and they have only North Carolina to blame for their 19-0 loss.

That's from Jim Tatum, the Terrapin headman who was anything but gloomy last night as he and his staff got a look at the motion pictures of the Griffith Stadium skirmish.

"The slippery field didn't cause us to fumble," he said, "Carolina did. Its defensive line, particularly the guards and tackles, hounded us all day and forced the fumbles.

"If we had stuck to basic stuff, instead of trying to use those tricky laterals and fancy handoffs, well—we may have gotten a tie out of it. But we wanted to win that one and went all out.

"WE CAME OUT of the game with no physical injuries, but the boys are down mentally. They put everything they had into it and it was quite a blow to us that Carolina got away in the last period."

Big Jim thought that his Terrapins came out on the wrong end of an official's decision which awarded the Tar Heels the ball after Charlie Justice had apparently fumbled a punt on his own 22 early in the first quarter.

"The pictures show that Justice clearly fumbled and that our guard, Al Phillips, recovered," he said. "But they got the ball on their own 22. It might have been a different story if we had gotten the break there, but it just wasn't our day, I guess."

Today the squad must begin forgetting the loss and prepare for another back-breaking assignment—Vanderbilt, in Nashville, Saturday. The Commodores have beaten Northwestern and Alabama, among others, and have lost only to Kentucky and L.S.U.

THE BIG GAME here Saturday pairs the two local rivals, Georgetown and G. W. at Griffith Stadium . . . The Hoyas have experienced a not-so-hot year with three wins and four losses. The Colonials haven't won a game yet and if they can rack up the Hoyas they'll consider the season a whopping success.

If Virginia gets by N. C. State Saturday at Charlottesville and North Carolina does the trick against Duke in Durham, the Virginia-Carolina scrap the following week in Chapel Hill will produce one of the Orange Bowl contestants . . . The Orange Bowl people are hot for Carolina, despite the Tar Heels' two losses, but if the Cavaliers upset them, then it'll be Virginia sniffing the Orange Blossoms New Year's Day.

Assistant Coach Flucie Stewart of Maryland has scouted Vanderbilt five times this year . . . "I think I know the team so well that I call their plays in my sleep," he said yesterday . . . Stewart scouted Vandy against Miami in Florida Friday night and was back in time to see Maryland play Carolina Saturday

Stribling And Walker Box Tonight

Ken Stribling, rated as one of the hardest punchers in this area, will face Johnny Walker of Philadelphia in tonight's feature bout at Turner's Arena.

Over a 10-round distance—or less—Stribling and Walker will battle it out in a rematch with Walker ruling a slight choice.

Stribling will be gunning for his ninth victory of the season.

Meeting several weeks ago in the same ring, Walker came up with a right that landed below the belt before two minutes of the first round had elapsed. Stribling was declared the winner on a foul.

The invader beat Smuggy Hursey, once knocked out Ossie Harris and fought Billy Fox and Jake LaMotta.

Frank Sweeney, once stopped by Stribling, will box Billy Snead in a five-round semiwindup. Other bouts show Eddie Franklin against Art Bethea in a five; Flat Top Cummings against Bobby Suma in a five; Tommy Larner vs. Miles Jones and Spike Graham vs. Jackie Ford in fours.

one. Later he kicked a 45-yard field goal after Dick Wildung recovered DeCorrevont's bobble and the Packers led, 13-7, at half-time.

Ken Keuper stole Christman's pass in the third and returned it 22 yards. Jacobs hit Clyde Goodnight for 12 and finally rifled 22 yards to Bob Forte for a marker.

Following the Cards' two scoring drives in the fourth period which gave them the 21-20 edge, Jacobs pitched 29 yards to Luhn to put the Packers on the 15 with 30 seconds to go. Ward Cuff, who converted twice, attempted a field goal from the 23 but the ball soared wide as the game ended.

160-Pound Crown Won By Merchants

Gordon O'Neill, formerly Woodrow Wilson High School tackle, yesterday scored both touchdowns to spark Car Credit to a 13-6 victory over Anacostia Eagles for the Metropolitan Football League's unlimited championship before 4000 persons at Griffith Stadium.

In the playoff game for the 160-pound title, Southwest Merchants won over Southeast A. C., 12-6.

O'Neill scored his first touchdown in the second period when he blocked Don Purdy's punt on Anacostia's 10, recovered on the four and scooted across. George Hughes, former St. John's Cadet, added the point.

Purdy Races 50 Yards

Purdy, one of the league's smallest men, contributed the game's outstanding play in the third quarter when he attempted to punt, fumbled, recovered and then raced 50 yards to pay dirt. However, Phil Blaine missed the try for point.

O'Neill clinched the title for Car Credit in the final stanza when he intercepted a Purdy pass on the Eagles' 46 and outran the entire Anacostia team for the touchdown. Hughes' conversion try missed.

John Mason, former Central High ace, entered Southwest's line-up late in the third quarter and unveiled a passing barrage that brought his team its winning score early in the last period. The count was knotted at 6-all, when Mason, standing on Southeast's 14, where his team had advanced through his aerial work, pitched to Newman on the 10, who shook off four would-be tacklers to score.

Southeast scored first, early in the opening quarter, when Adrian Kidwell, Harry Bond and Sammy Stelle combined in an 80-yard drive that was climaxed when Settle followed perfect interference from the 27-yard line to score.

Southwest deadlocked it in the second period when Edsel Martz, attempting to punt from his own 26, had his kick blocked by Southwest's Warren Sondheimer and Lester Sneed, and Jimmy Vakas recovered to score from the 18.

Tereshinski Chased

Leading up to the tally were Baugh's passes to Hugh Taylor for 26 yards, an interference penalty on Nussbaumer's attempted catch at the Detroit 25, and a Baugh-to-Saenz heave for all of two yards, reaching the 23.

Then began the famine for Washington. Adding to their woes they lost the services of Joe Tereshinski, defensive star at end, who was waved out of action after a fistic argument with Joe Margucci.

From their own 20 the Lions moved to their next score. LeForce passes and runs by Camp Wilson and Dudley brought the ball to Detroit's 43, where Zimmerman kicked to Saenz.

When Eddie fumbled as he was hit by Pregulman the recovery was made by Madarik on the 25 and four plays later it was 14-7. Madarik went over from the 4 after Dudley's spectacular catch of a LeForce pass set things up.

Play Waxes Rough

Rough play followed, indicated by the fact one Detroit play was voided because both sides were unnecessarily rough and another when the Lions were holding at the same time Washington was interfering with a pass receiver.

Midway of the second quarter the Lions had passed from their own 47 to the 13 before their downs gave out. Zimmerman solved the situation by kicking a field goal from the 20 and it was 17-7 favoring the Lions.

There followed perhaps the shortest series of passes on record. Baugh hurled three times, completing all three to Taylor, Nussbaumer and Duckworth—and on fourth down the Redskins still needed 11 yards for a first.

Bill Dudley Scores

Baugh's attempt to kick out from the 'Skin 21 was blocked by still another former Washingtonian, Bill Ward. Pregulman recovered on the 14 and after five plays had driven to the Redskin 2, Dudley scored by twisting out of the grasp of Guard Johnny Steber.

The early portion of the second half was marked by a LeForce to Kmetovic pass that gained 43 yards and forced Jack Jenkins to make three tackles of the same hard-running Kmetovic before he was finally stopped. Zimmerman tried a field goal from the 43 shortly thereafter but it was far short.

Back came the Redskins with a march from their 20 to the Detroit 24 before they were held. One Detroit line play picked up a yard and one Detroit pass, LeForce to Watt, picked up the other 75 for a touchdown.

Finally Washington got its second touchdown. From the 25 it romped in an involved series, spotted by a 22-yard pass from Baugh to Jenkins, to the 1-yard line. Dick Poillon went over, fumbled, but was allowed the score and then kicked the second of his three extra points.

Detroit's last scoring effort was on the end of an 83-yard bit of sprinting that carried to the Redskin 6 before a man-in-motion penalty shoved the Lions back to the 11. LeForce was passing and Watt was being covered by Aldrich and Poillon when the scoring pass was made.

Fifty-six yards were consumed in the dying minutes by the thoroughly beaten Redskins as they marched to their third useless touchdown. It was second down on the Detroit 1 when Baugh dropped a pass in Duckworth's arms in the end zone at the same time the gun went off.

Frico finally hit pay dirt in the second period as Albert spearheaded a 56-yard march with passes to Nick Suseoff, Alyn Beals and Len Eshmont. Eshmont took an Albert pass for the final 8 yards.

The Browns collected another touchdown just before the half on a sustained drive of 81 yards. Lavelli took his second touchdown pass from Graham to cover the final 15 yards.

Cleveland reached its offensive peak in the third quarter. Tony Colella intercepted one of Albert's passes and returned it 44 yards to the Frisco 2. Graham finally sneaked over from the one-half.

The Forty-Niners failed to advance the ball after the kickoff, and the Browns struck again on a 64-yard play from Graham to Lavelli. Lavelli gathered in Graham's toss on the Frisco 12, faked Beals brilliantly and scored.

Jess Freitas, former Santa Clara star and Albert's understudy, sparked the Forty-Niners to their final period marker. He connected with three aerials in the 45-yard drive, and John Strzykalski plunged over from the five.

The Browns' final touchdown covered 76 yards and featured Graham's passing and runs by Motley and Tony Adamle, who plunged into the end zone from the one-foot line.

THE CHALLENGE TO AMERICANS

THE immediate and pressing challenge to our belief in freedom and prosperity is in western Europe. Here are people who have traditionally shared our faith in human dignity. These are the nations by whose citizens our land was settled and in whose tradition our civilization is rooted. They are threatened by Communism—but only because of the dark shadows cast by the hopelessness, hunger and fear that have been the aftermath of the Nazi war. Communism or no Communism, menace or no menace, it is our simple duty as neighbors to take a generous part in helping these great peoples to help themselves.

The reconstruction of western Europe is a task from which Americans can decide to stand apart only if they wish to desert every principle by which they claim to live. And, as a decision of policy, it would be the most tragic mistake in our history. We must take part in this work; we must take our full part; we must be sure that we do enough.

I must add that I believe we should act quickly. The penalty of delay in reconstruction is to increase the size of the job and to multiply difficulties. We require a prompt and large-scale program. The government must lead the way, but we who are private citizens must support that leadership as men in all parties supported help to our Allies in 1941. The sooner we act, the surer our success—and the less it will cost us.

The need of Europe is a challenge partly to our generosity and partly to our good sense. We have ample justification for action on either ground. It is an opportunity for the best that is in America, a chance for us to show the practical idealism on which we have with reason learned to pride ourselves.

This is the way to disappoint the Russians. But it is not anti-Russian. This is a course which must be followed not because we fear the Russians, but simply because we have confidence in ourselves.

As we take part in the rebuilding of Europe, we must remember that we are building world peace, not an American peace. Freedom demands tolerance, and many Americans have much to learn about the variety of forms which free societies may take. There are Europeans, just as there are Americans, who do not believe in freedom, but they are in a minority. We shall not be able to separate the sheep from the goats merely by asking whether they believe in our particular economic and political system. Our cooperation with the free men of Europe must be founded on the basic principles of human dignity, and not on any theory that their way to freedom must be exactly the same as ours. We cannot ask that Europe be rebuilt in the American image. If we join in the task of reconstruction with courage, confidence and goodwill, we shall learn—and teach—a lot. But we must start with a willingness to understand.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Special Session Not Expected to Act on Federal Worker Bills

Not a single Federal worker bill can be expected to be taken up by the special session of Congress that begins today.

The only hope is for final congressional approval of the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson liberalized retirement bill. Even that is most unlikely. That bill, approved by the House during the regular session, must go back to the House for final approval even if the Senate okays it. The Senate Civil Service Committee plans to tack two amendments onto it which are:

1. Provision of benefits for widows and children, and,

2. Exemption of FBI agents from certain sections of the bill so as not to interfere with the new FBI Retirement Act which allows its agents to retire at 50 after 20 years of service.

However, hearings on possible pay raise bills will get under way during the special session. The Senate committee will meet December 3 on the Flanders-Baldwin bill to provide higher salaries for top-flight Government administrators. Chairman Langer already has served notice that he'll attempt to amend this bill to provide for a general pay raise for all Federal workers.

GPO: Federal worker leaders will be watching an action by the Joint Congressional Committee on Printing for a possible tip-off on the congressional attitude toward higher Federal salaries.

The printing committee will meet within a few days to consider pay raises for the 6500 employes of the Government Printing Office here. The employes, generally, are demanding a flat 15 per cent cost-of-living boost. The committee can be expected to approve an increase to take effect early next month, but it probably will be closer to 10 than 15 per cent.

LOYALTY: Lawrence V. Meloy, the hard-driving Civil Service official, must hold down two important jobs for the next four months. Over the weekend he was appointed executive secretary of the new Civil Service Loyalty Review Board. But he's also chairman of the Commission Appeals Board that is being superceded by the new board, whose chairman is Seth W. Richardson.

Before the Meloy board are six cases of Federal workers who are accused of disloyalty. These cases must be disposed of before the Meloy board will be abolished. The cases are reported to involve Federal workers who were appointed to jobs subject to Civil Service character inquries.

I & N: I have a letter from a group of Immigration and Naturalization Service employes who say they definitely don't want their agency to be moved back here from Philadelphia until they can secure satisfactory housing in this city. The group say they represent over 300 of the 400-odd employes who will move back here with I & N. The letter reads in part:

"Many of us have spent considerable time in Washington recently, over weekends and during the week on annual leave, making inquiries as to the availability of habitable dwellings. We have returned to Philadelphia almost without exception depressed and discouraged concerning present possibilities of securing satisfactory housing in Washington.

"At least 300 of us are hopeful that our move will be deferred until some moderation of the present acute housing shortage occurs in Washington."

PERSONAL: George D. Riley, staff director of the Senate Civil Service Committee, will ride across the country in a railway mail car to learn first-hand the problems of railway mail clerks. . . . William Seldesman has been promoted to assistant general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board . . . Russ Orescan is back on his old job with the House Appropriations Committee . . . David C. Adams has resigned from Federal Communications to join FCC Chairman Charles Denny at NBC.

NAVY: Some 12,000 of its per diem employes the country over are faced with being fired. Officials say the firings must be made to offset the cost of higher salaries ordered no later than December 1 for most of its 200,000 per diem employes.

The lay-offs will hit mainly Navy's West Coast employes since they were given larger pay raises than its East Coast workers. However, some lay-offs were to be ordered among the 15,000 Navy per diems in this area.

Meantime, the per diems here are planning to appeal to Navy Secretary Sullivan for an increase in wages at least equal to the raise approved for the department's West Coast workers.

POSTAL: AFL's potent National Federation of Postal Clerks will get its pay raise drive in full swing this weekend when its executive committee meets in Chicago. It can be expected to urge Congress to vote postal employes a flat cost-of-living pay raise of around $600 a year.

The postal union is headed by Leo George who is also chairman of AFL's Government Employe Council which claims 500,000 Federal worker members. The AFL already has indorsed a cost-of-living pay raise for Government employes.

William K. Hutchinson, of 1603 Connecticut ave. nw., from the 2000 block of Hillyer pl. nw.

Mrs. Nellie B. Walker, of 436 M st. nw., from 10th and Westminster sts. nw.

Sunny, Cool Here Today; Snow in West

Mostly sunny and continued cool weather was predicted for the Washington area today, as other parts of the Nation donned earmuffs or prepared to shovel out from under as much as 10 inches of snow.

Heavy snowfalls were recorded in North and South Dakota over the weekend. Some snow fell in the North Central States, but the Chicago weatherman said the precipitation area was clearing, and lower temperatures generally might be expected today and tomorrow.

The national low temperature reported yesterday at Caspar, Wyo., where eight degrees above zero was recorded. In Iowa, 30 communities were handicapped by storm interruptions of telephone service. Repairmen were making progress in restoring lines, despite hazardous highway conditions.

Don't Worry, Mother—They'll Be All Right

THE STAY-AT-HOMES—While mother flies to London, the Guerrieri family prepare to sit down to Sunday dinner at 1724 S st. se. Left to right are Mary, 5; Lois, 6; Louis Guerrieri, their father, Richard, 12, and Carmella, 8

D. C. Mother Flying to Attend Elizabeth's Pre-Nuptial Party

fact—that you can get $25,000 worth of insurance for $12.50!

It's easy to realize how small this old world is now, watching these people coming and going through the overseas terminal. They're going to Paris, to London, to Bermuda and other far-off places just as we think of taking a trip to Richmond.

Photographers and newsmen were at the terminal and they fired enough flash bulbs at me to give me the sun grins. Captain Elliott even let me in his "office," the flight deck of the Constellation, before we took off.

There were so many dials and gadgets it made me afraid he might forget to turn something on—or off.

Immediately on arrival in New York last night, I started up 33d st. with some friends, bent on some more last-minute shopping. We ended up at Lord and Taylor's on 5th Ave.—a place I've read about and where I've dreamed of buying something.

Can't Find "Little Black Hat"

All I wanted was a little black hat to complete my outfit for the party at the palace. The store finally closed on me and I had tried on hats up to $50—but left without satisfaction as well as without the hat.

These buildings here draw your attention if you live where they aren't so tall. Cars shooting everywhere at once and people crossing against the lights and in the middle of the block . . .

Store windows are beautiful, obviously dressed by skilled persons who must study the job a long time. Lord and Taylor's had a window of wedding clothes . . . one of them a creamy satin damask very fitted with fine pleated bands at the waist and neck with a train that covered the whole floor of the window.

But loveliest was the veil (Spanish style) of heavenly fine lace hanging to a point down each front to the waistline.

Still Can't Believe It

A cab was impossible to find, so we took a double-decker bus to our hotel—a quiet little spot in the East 60s; then freshened up and started out to eat.

I still can hardly believe that less than two days ago I had no idea I would be making a trip over the Atlantic Ocean to London. And all I have to do for it is write a few articles for The Washington Post which is paying my expenses.

This is too easy. And for a trip that I had to be talked into!

Thrills for me, a little homebody from Washington, popped up one a minute. We ate at the Des Artistes on West 67th st., where Howard Chandler Christy had done lovely, eye-catching nudes on every wall. He lives near by and was standing near the entrance when we walked in.

After dinner we visited the fabulous apartment of Felicity Buranelli, which is also on 67th Street. Understand 67th is the artists' street of uptown New York.

Her 17th century Italian furniture and tapestry was another thrill of the evening. Miss Buranelli, an art patron, is sponsor of a project called "Medal of the Month" for teaching citizenship to children through the lives of great men.

She gave her own peace medal, struck in bronze with a bas relief head which is a composite of three young boys from Gramercy Boys Club here. She is currently working on one honoring the famed airman, General Billy Mitchell.

We left there and looked for the quickest way to see New York—found it atop the tower of the Beekman Towers Hotel on East River. I drank ginger ale, walked the observation terrace 26 floors up. The lights of the city were just as every American sees New York on the movie screens.

I finally got to bed about 2 a. m. I've had about two nights' sleep in a week! They tell me the drone of the airplane motors will put me to sleep. I can use it!

I'm hoping all the time the children's colds are better and that my darlings don't miss me too much.

Wedding No Holiday For House of Commons

London, Nov. 16 (AP).—It will be business as usual Thursday, Princess Elizabeth's wedding day, for Britain's House of Commons.

"The holiday is official only for school children," an informed source said tonight, when asked about the Parliament program for the week.

"The wedding will be over long before 2:30 p. m., the time the House usually assembles," he added, "and goodness knows they have work to do."

Guerrieris Carry On In Mother's Absence

Richard Helps Father Cook Sunday Dinner As 'Mom' Wings Way to Princess' Party

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

"Mom's onher way to London."

That was the refrain in the Guerrieri household yesterday after word was received that the plane carrying Mrs. Lois Guerrieri on her Cinderella trip to London had taken off from New York.

Louis Guerrieri, her 42-year-old husband, remarked, "I'm certainly glad she got off without any trouble."

Twelve-year-old Richard Guerrieri and his sisters, Cormella, 8, and Lois, 6, loked equally pleased. Only 3-year-old Mary, the youngest child, was unimpressed. London was too far off from 1724 S st. se. to mean much.

While the plane carrying Mrs. Guerrieri to attend Princess Elizabeth's pre-wedding party at St. James's Palace Tuesday afternoon winged its way across the Atlantic, the Guerrieris prepared their Sunday dinner.

Richard, who has quite a reputation as a cook, helped his father with the meal, which featured hamburgers, mashed potatoes, and string beans, with a fancy ice cream pie for dessert.

Louis Guerrieri, looking slightly harassed, nevertheless seemed to have a hand for everything—dressing the small children, directing the cooking, supervising the table setting.

"We ironed this morning," Richard said proudly, "I helped Dad."

"It's not really much, this work we are doing," said his father who is employed by the District Engineering Department. "I've done this often when my wife was ill."

When he heard that his wife went to fashionable Lord & Taylor to buy a hat before leaving New York, but could find nothing she liked, he laughed, saying:

"That's the way it is when we go shopping. Unless she finds exactly what she wants, she won't buy anything."

Today will be a special event at the house—Cormella's eighth birthday. Her mother made sure she ordered a cake for that celebration before she left Washington.

While the children have their party after the older ones return from school, however, Louis Guerrieri will be thinking mostly of his wife.

"All I want to hear," he said, "is that she has landed safely in London. This is a great trip for her, something she can talk about the rest of her life . . ."

KINDLINESS REWARDED—Mrs. Lois Guerrieri, left, of 1724 S st. se., shows Airline Hostess Rita Lewis the invitation she received to attend an afternoon tea at St. James's Palace November 18. Dishwashing Machine Given To Elizabeth

London, Nov. 16 (AP).—A dishwashing machine, a grand piano, the manuscript of a symphony, two home movie sets, a Bible, a giant fish and a Siamese kitten were listed today among the latest wedding presents for Prince Elizabeth.

The electric dishwasher was the Princess' own idea. Citizens of Leamington, Warwickshire, gave her 200 guineas ($840) to use as she liked. She told them: "I feel sure the people would wish me to spend the money on something which I shall really need, and the machine will be of great practical use in my house."

She also chose the piano—a drawing-room grand in an ebonized case. It came from the RAF, whose members were invited to contribute small sums.

Russian Writes Symphony

The manuscript of the symphony was dedicated to the Princess by Composer Yuri Arbatzky, a Russian living in Regensburg, Germany.

Earl and Countess Mountbatten, uncle and aunt of Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, Elizabeth's future husband, gave the Princess one movie set and the British film industry the other.

The Bible—the King James version bound in turquoise blue morocco and bearing the Princess' monogram—was presented by the YWCA.

A trawler firm in Grimsby, Lincolnshire, offered a 105-pound sturgeon, which may be handed over to a welfare organization.

Two nurses in Corsham, Wiltshire, where Lieutenant Mountbatten is assigned as an instructor at a naval station, offered Elizabeth the kitten, expected in a few weeks. The Princess agreed if the nurses would take care of the kitten until the couple are settled in their new home.

Swiss Offer Pleases

Tokens of great variety keep coming. A chemical firm in Fife, Scotland, sent this as a formula for happiness:

"God bless your highness a' your days, wi' this recipe: Take 1 pound each of love, sweet temper and self-forgetfulness; ½ pound each of butter of youth and good looks; 1 ounce each of pounded wit and dry humor; 2 tablespoons of sweet argument; 1 pint of rippling laughter and a wine glass and a half of common sense. Mix these ingredients well together into a comfortable home and bake well forever."

Buckingham Palace said Elizabeth liked especially Switzerland's offer to supply sanatorium accommodations for 50 tubercular British children.

Wilcher Asks Probe Of Arlington Election

Stephen M. Smith, campaign manager for the Arlington County Republican candidates in the recent election, announced yesterday that Talmage S. Wilcher, defeated State Senate candidate, had employed an investigator to probe three aspects of the election campaign.

Wilcher has already asked the Federal Security Agency, the Federal Bureau of Invesigation and the Civil Service Commission to investigate one of the three complaints he has against the Democratic campaign. If they do not take action by tomorrow, he intends to ask the House Civil Service Committee for an inquiry.

In that complaint, Wilcher alleges that, during the campaign, the Arlington County Democratic machine used information about indorsements he received for a Social Security job in 1937. This information, he maintains, could only have come from Government personnel files, which are supposed to be confidential.

The second angle he is having investigated, Smith said, is "the smear campaign conducted by the Democraic machine." Wilcher made public everything he said during the campaign, Smith declared, but the Decocrats "used three cars to go from beer parlor to bowling alley, smearing Wilcher."

Finally, Wilcher's investigator is looking into "why Charles R. Fenwick, the Senator elect, deluded people into believing that conditions exposed by Wilcher were not true," according to Smith.

Chest Speeds Effort to Sign 70,000 More

Give to feel good—and make others feel better.

With that theme uppermost, volunteer solicitors for the Community Chest Federation worked feverishly yesterday to sign up at least 70,000 more contributing members by today's fourth campaign progress report luncheon at the United States Chamber of Commerce at 12:30 p. m.

The number, and in numbers there is strength, is greater than the present campaign membership average of over 52,000 pledges and gifts reported in at the three previous report meetings. At conclusion of the third report, the drive membership had reached 158,000.

Chairmen of nine groups of solicitors from the Chest Federation yesterday pointed up the call for increasing Chest membership. They pointed out the value of community interests in mass acceptance of the individual pledge principle.

All Become Members

"It is important for everybody to realize that when you give through the Chest to the Red Feather agencies you become a contributing member of the Community Chest Federation for 1948," declared a statement of the campaign executive committee.

"There is only one kind of membership in the Federation, and that is the individual membership conferred only through bona fide volunteer solicitors' receipting of pledge cards signed by the contributor as an individual."

The six-Chest organization for Greater Washington is seeking to raise $3,900,000 in cash and pledges for support of some 125 Red Feather agencies in 1948. At midpoint last Friday, contributions totalled 49.07 per cent of the goal.

To Center on Health Day

At today's report meeting, at 12:15 noon, the program will center on Health Day, with Mrs. Eileen Hurley, staff member of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, as guest speaker. She will describe the day's work of a visiting nurse.

J. S. (Jack) Bartlett, chairman of Business Unit II, will make a detailed progress report of the work of his new campaign unit.

Prince Georges County, Md., unit section chairman and workers will meet tonight at 8 in the County Service Building, Hyattsville, for their second special progress report. Special awards for outstanding achievement will be made.

The Girl Scouts of Troop 22, Brandywine, Md., will sing at a victory dinner of the Prince Georges County Community Chest campaign workers, next Friday, at the Varsity Grill, College Park, Md. Mrs. Dudley Aist and Mrs. Richard Bennett will lead the chorus.

Campaign workers throughout the county are invited to attend the Dutch-treat dinner and reservations are accepted by telephone at the Community Chest office, UN. 0333, according to Arnold Hodgson, executive director.

Greater Washington's drive for funds is scheduled to conclude on Tuesday, November 25.

Eleven Dead and 510 Injured October Traffic Toll in Area

Deaths last month did not reflect the normal slump in vacation travel, tallying 11 traffic fatalities in Greater Washington to 10 such deaths in September.

October brought to 121 the number of persons killed by traffic in the District, Alexandria and Arlington, Fairfax, Prince Georges and Montgomery counties by November 1. The total to November 1, last year, was 114.

Drivers, passengers and pedestrians who escaped death but not injury last month totaled 510 persons, or 45 less than the number hurt in September traffic mishaps, statistics compiled by The Washington Post disclosed. The 10-month total of injured was 4785, as compared to 4467 during the corresponding period last year.

More 1947 Accidents

In numbers of accidents recorded, too, this year leads last by a score of 12,137 to 11,082. October accounted for 1335 accidents involving injury or property damage sufficient for police record-taking. This compares to 1359 recorded in September, and 1207 registered in October, 1946.

Six persons died last month in traffic accidents occurring within the District of Columbia. Four others succumbed to traffic mishaps in Prince Georges County, Md., and the area's eleventh victim, a 22-year-old Marine, was killed in a Route 1 truck collision in Fairfax County, Va., on October 9.

Washington's traffic fatalities in October showed death was no respecter of age or sex. They included a 71-year-old man, a 65-year-old street vender hit by a streetcar, a 12-year-old boy cyclist, a 25-year-old pedestrian and a 9-year-old girl who darted from between parked automobiles into the path of a taxicab.

District Toll 60

Their deaths brought to 60 the number of persons fatally injured in District traffic accidents from January 1 to November 1. For the same 10 months last year 51 died here. Six persons have been killed in the District during this month.

Prince Georges County, Md., traffic gateway between Washington and routes north, registered four fatalities in October, or one more death than was chalked up in that county in September. In contrast, the county records showed 16 fewer persons were injured there during the preceding month, and 15 fewer accidents were recorded.

Traffic records for Montgomery County, Md., showed that 43 persons suffered physical injury last month out of 94 accidents reported. In September, out of 107 accidents in the county, only 34 persons were hurt. There were no traffic deaths either month.

Arlington County, Va., reported one traffic death in September and none in October, bringing to nine the number killed in that county this year.

Thought the same number died during the first 10 months of last year the injury totals dropped from 154, by November 1, 1946, to but 71 for the corresponding period of this year.

Alexandria, with no traffic deaths the past two months, kept its fatality column even with last year's records for the 10-month period, at two deaths each year.

Fairfax County's one death in October brought the total to five, by November 1, Twenty-four persons were hurt in accidents in that county last month, or an average of 1 injured for every 2 accidents recorded.

In September, Fairfax County maintained much the same average, without a fatality. Out of 33 accidents registered in the county in September, 15 persons required treatment for injuries.

Mrs. Truman Gives Doll to Thrift Shop

Mrs. Truman's doll, so daintily dressed at the White House, will have the place of honor on the shelves of the Thrift Shop, at 809 9th st. nw., on Wednesday, when the sale of Christmas dolls opens. Surrounding her will be the rare dolls contributed by ladies of the foreign embassies and legations, in their colorful costumes, ready to grace the cabinets of the fortunate doll collectors of Washington. The exhibitions of these dolls on F st. in the windows of Gude's and Harris & Ewing have attracted much attention during the past week.

Specially interesting to shoppers seeking a doll to delight some little girl on Christmas morning, will be the rows upon rows of American-made dolls. These are of all sizes, and all prices. Since these dolls have also been contributed, they can be sold at exceptionally low prices, and since many of them have been dressed by hand, they are unusually nice.

The proceeds of the sale will benefit the sick and handicapped children of Washington for which the Thrift Shop is operated. Children's Hospital, the Children's Country Home, the Prenatal Clinic of Columbia Hospital, the Child Welfare Society, the Junior League and St. John's Orphanage are the partners in this joint charitable undertaking which is conducted under the able direction of Mrs. D. Elegant Era Revival Seen at Cafritz Fete

By Marie McNair

The drawing-room scene at Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz's house on Foxhall rd. yesterday afternoon might have been lifted from a Gay Nineties picture book.

There were feathered picture hats; ruffled skirts, shirtwaist tops, high necklines and an air of elegance typical of the era.

But nothing could be more modern than the house that sits on the hill and looks out over the twinkling lights of Washington. Grecian murals in the modern manner adorn the walls; there are mirrors everywhere, and marble halls, and the sleek lines of the present day.

The hostess looked like a Gibson Girl in a shirtwaist blouse of silver lame topping a black velvet skirt fitted to below the knees, where it swirled out in a full flounce over hoops.

Mrs. Harold Walker's black gown had a skirt trimmed in fringe which fell to a short train, and Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of the Senator, looked actually demure in black velvet with "Florida snowballs," she called the two silk white tassels dangling from her hat, to her shoulder.

There was pretty little Mrs. Frank Vanderlip looking like a pixie in a full-skirted black taffeta frock ballerina length, and a poke bonnet tied under her chin.

Busy Cabinet Officer There

And now—who else was there?

Well—the hard-working Secretary of Agriculture, Clinton Anderson, who some one remarked makes on an average of three speeches a day, taking time out with Mrs. Anderson, and seemingly enjoying it.

And the Swiss Minister and Mme Bruggmann who came early and were on their way soon after; Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, in a smart candy striped taffeta frock in pink and black, with bows of the same material on her hat and with her daughter, Margret. Aniz Azer, Egyptian Minister, with his inevitable cigarette burning from a holder; Eric Johnston, movie czar ond Mrs. Johnston in a circle of friends; Senator Arthur Capper, lingering on through the cocktail hours.

Gen. Gordon Young was there, with Mrs. Young in trailing dinner gown, going home to entertain at dinner for Mrs. Young's sister, Miss Katherine Mills, down from New York for the weekend, and with her at the party.

Gen. Conger Pratt was in the dining room where Mrs. Sidney Graves was pouring tea, while Sadie Pratt, just off the train, was telling friends about her trip to New York.

Ralph Forster and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Roberts, jr., had things to talk about; Mrs. Irene Caldwell, looking ever so pretty in black, was asking a few friends for a buffet supper Thursday night in honor of Palmer Hoyt, jr., and his bride, here for a few days before going to Europe.

Accordionist Plays

Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward were there and then others were Marriner Eccles, Mrs. Mitchell Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippman, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris and Mrs. McCeney Werlich and her son, Bob.

Above the strains of the accordionist stationed in the foyer, I heard Mrs. Lee Murphy calling greetings to Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim; Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard saying she had just come from Col. and Mrs. Consuelo Seoane's cocktail party, and the Leslie Biffles saying "hello" to half a dozen friends at once.

Mrs. Peyton Gordon took her turn at the tea table and then to go on—there were Mr. and Mrs. Constantine Stackelberg, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, bachelors Fred Roy and Wolcott Waggaman—Doggie to his friends; Drew Dudley and his sister, Mrs. Joseph Casey, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Henle, Mr. and Mrs. P. Y. Hovatt and popular Tom Morgan.

Caught a glimpe of Admiral William O. Spears across the room, saw Mrs. William Mann in quiet conversation and Cliff Folger making his way through the throng. Emil and Gudren Hurja were being congratulated on their successful party on Saturday and Mrs. Ken Watson had the "new look" in a pastel printed satin gown.

And—I picked up this bit of news. That Alice Hendrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Pomeroy Hendrick, who'll be presented to society in New York this winter, will also have a Washington debut. Her parents will give a dinner for her on December 29 at the 1925 F Street Club.

Mrs. Palmer Represents Travel Agency

"We make reservations for anybody going anywhere," is the way Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer describes her new association with the Haley Corp. Travel Service.

The widow of the Attorney General during Woodrow Wilson's administration, is at present doing business in her apartment at the Shoreham where the telephone rings like mad all day. Later the Haley Corp., which already has offices in New York and San Francisco, will open up here.

Meantime, Mrs. Palmer, who has friends all over the country, has made hotel and steamship reservations for many of them for the Olympic games to be held late in January or early February in Switzerland. She takes on the job of plane and train reservations for California, Mexico, etc., and is getting lots of calls for Nassau cruises.

Nex week Mrs. Palmer will spend Saturday in New York to attend the wedding of the former Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley's daughter, Anne, to Edward J. Hickey.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

I have two umbrellas which are perfectly good except that they are no longer waterproof. Is there any type of liquid on the market which can either be brushed or sprayed on them to make them waterproof without ruining the fabric or making them stiff? J. F. L.

I have been unable to locate such a waterproofing material. However, some of the umbrella repair shops do make such a preparation for their own use. They do not recommend it for all materials and colors.

You recently published a request for the name of a firm making new blankets from old ones. A friend tells me there is such a mill in Litchfield, Me., and one in Winthrop, Me. They are small towns so a letter addressed simply Woolen Mill or Blanket Mill might reach them. W. A. M.

Many thanks to W. A. M. for sending in this information.

My maid put a hot pan down on my maple dining room table by accident. It left a large round imprint. If there anything I can do to cover this up? H. C.

Rubbing with spirits of camphor or essence of peppermint will usually take heat marks off of polished surfaces.

I have a weathered oak library table. Can this be bleached to harmonize with the other blond woods now in vogue? What is the technique of bleaching—or had I better have it done by a professional? J. S.

Many people bleach furniture successfully at home. There are commercial bleaches on the market, or you can use oxalic acid (one ounce of crystals dissolved in a pint of water). The latter isn't as strong as commercial bleach, but is considerably less expensive. Before the bleach can be applied, the wood must be cleaned of all previous finishes. Protect clothes and floor well with newspapers and wear rubber gloves as the bleach is powerful stuff. Apply bleach with a brush or rubber sponge. The oxalic acid solution has to remain on overnight, after which it must be washed off with borax dissolved in a quart of warm water. A second coat of bleach may be applied before washing if a lighter color is wanted. If you use a commercial bleach, follow the directions on the package. You should be able to bleach the table to a satisfactory light shade. After bleaching, finish with a coat of shellac, sanding the surface lightly with fine sandpaper after the shellac dries.

Should invitations to social affairs be sent to friends who have had a death in the family within the year? I feel it is courteous to send the invitation and allow the recipient to accept or refuse, but my cousin feels it would be better not to issue the invitation. L. M.

I'm inclined to agree with you in your feeling about sending the invitation. Less rigid mourning customs have prevailed in recent years, partly as a result of the two wars, during which bereaved families felt it right to present a brave front to the world and continue with their usual pursuits. Of course, unless you're a close friend and the party is small, you'll probably want to wait a few months after the bereavement before issuing an invitation, but after that it seems courteous to me to let the family make its own choice about attending the party.

Can anything be done to repair a broken-off point of a pair of scissors? They are long, thin antique desk shears, and a three-inch piece has been broken off one of the blades. Can it be welded? Where could I have it done? E. N. C.

Most companies that sharpen and repair scissors won't even attempt to replace pieces broken off blades. However, an employe of a barber supply firm located in the 500 block of 12th st. nw. says that if you'll bring the scissors in, they'll see if they can at least restore their appearance, if not their value as cutting equipment.

To R. G. L., M. H. S. and P. P., all of whom have written in about refinishing furniture in an antique pine effect: This can be done with the aid of either burnt sienna or burnt umber. Burnt sienna gives a redder shade than the umber, which makes a more brown stain. Both can be purchased in tubes in paint stores, and should be diluted considerably with turpentine before applying. Apply to wood from which all the finish has been removed. Use a cloth or sponge for applying, then wipe off the residue with a fresh cloth immediately. You'll probably want to experiment first on the under side of the furniture or at some other inconspicuous spot to be sure you're getting the right shade. After the stained wood has dried thoroughly, apply a coat of shellac, let it dry, then sand lightly with fine sandpaper. Apply another coat and after it dries, sand it, too, so as to leave the furniture with a soft finish.

I lengthened my white wool dress and, after it was sent to the cleaners, the old hemline still shows soil. Is it possible for the cleaners to remove this, or is there a home remedy? W. D.

Such lines often disappear after several trips to the dry cleaners. However, you may be able to speed up the process if you point out the line to an expert cleaner and ask him to give it particular attention. Or you may be able to lighten the line yourself by working on it at home with dry cleaning powder or fluid.

Model Bakery To Feature 'Retarded' Pies

Ever try "retarding" your pies? That's what happens to them in the big refrigerator of the new model plant being formally opened here today by Stephenson's Bakery. It's a process that makes for flakier, tenderer crust, say the company's baking experts.

After being rolled out and put in the pans, pies are stored in the "retarding box" at a temperature just above freezing for at least 12 hours before baking.

The opening of the new building at 23d st. and Pennsylvania ave. se., will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of Stephenson's Bakery, which specializes in pies, cakes and pastries. The new plant, a modern brick and tile structure, contains numerous gargantuan machines—one which makes 300 dozen Danish pastries an hour, another which turns out 16,000 cookies every 60 minutes, a battery of six cake-making machines, a pie and fruit cake mixer which was made in Switzerland and works like two huge hands, and a 24-foot traveling tray oven.

Training Baby To Handle Cup Takes Patience

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

If the mother could start some new training without being too intent on its immediate accomplishment, success would be easier. Easier and pleasanter for all concerned.

The following is a brief account of the experience one mother had with teaching a 10-month-old baby to use the cup.

She decided to start training because the baby spent so much of his time chewing on the bottle nipple instead of pulling milk through it. He seemed relatively uninterested in the milk and she had to divide the formula giving him half of the bottle after the meal of solid food and the other half when she put him in bed, a half hour later. So she said, "I think, since he can drink well from a cup, I'll stop the bottles."

She found that she could persuade him to drink about four ounces by cup, but he pushed it away after that. So she sat in front of him and while she fed him solid food, she spooned in milk between bites. Sometimes, she could get him to take as much as four ounces more. Sometimes, he stuck out his tongue forcefully and she couldn't get another spoonful into him. When she put him to bed he fussed a little but usually not over a minute or two.

She kept this up for a week and felt she had accomplished something even if the spooning-in was laborious. He had had no bottles. Then for some reason he was extra fussy. He cried loudly when put to bed and after five minutes of this she got a bottle and gave him four ounces, feeling very badly at having to "give in to him."

The next day she offered no bottles but at noon he was extra cantankerous about drinking the milk, didn't want it, pushed it away, and she thought, "I'm going to have to give him the bottle again." But she didn't.

That night he grabbed the cup and drank four ounces before he ate and four ounces afterwards as if he wanted it. And again the next morning and the next noon. Now, she feels that she is over the hump, with bottles out of the way and spoons ditto. Obviously, if a person has patience and can overcome her own discouragement changing from bottle to cup need not be a difficult task.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Doctors Find Nothing Organically Wrong With Man to Whom Eating Is Ordeal; He Has Nausea Before, During or After Meals

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I are from different sections of the country, also from different racial backgrounds, and these things don't bother us a bit. Oddly enough, our difficulty seems to stem from the fact that he is tall and thin, whereas I am short and well rounded.

I like to eat and I love to cook; and I like to see a man eat and appreciate the good food his wife puts before him. But my husband has an inferiority complex because he is thin, and eating is just the worst possible torture for him.

Not only is there a scene every time we are confronted with an invitation to dine out; but at home our meals are a constant strain because I eat my meals as if I enjoyed them, whereas he has spells of nausea before or during or after nearly every meal.

Wife Prepares Appetizing Fare

THERE is nothing organically wrong with him. He has been examined by several competent physicians. And there is nothing wrong with my cooking. He gets good food and knows it.

I try to ignore his difficulties and refrain from urging him to eat. I don't know what to do, other than to be as gay and casual as possible; but it sometimes seems as if his performances are unbearable.

All his friends, as well as I, have tried to bolster his self-confidence. But their compliments on his good taste in clothes, as well as my praise of his good looks and broad shoulders, are of no avail. These things are all true; but all that matters to him is that he is too thin.

The situation has become a great strain on our marriage in every way, and I wonder if you can suggest some remedy that we have overlooked. F. S.

Neurotic Basis To His Distress

DEAR F. S.: Quite aside from the fact that competent examining physicians find nothing organically wrong with your husband, it is obvious that his involuntary convulsive nausea before, during or after meals is only figuratively related to food—or mealtimes, or robust fellowship.

Although ostensibly associated with the prospect of eating, the play of symptoms is too variable, also too charged with emotional distress, to be strictly interpreted as physical distaste for food.

In his formative years perhaps he suffered severe emotional deprivation (or lack of adequate love-nurture) as the usual thing; plus a serial experience of frightening assaults on his self-will or self-regard that may have been staged in company or at mealtimes—or so it seemed to him as a child.

He's Rejecting Life and Wife

SOME such unfortunate conditioning laid the psychological groundwork for his perniciously poor appetite, inferiority complex and skinny physique; and also established his "hexed" unconscious conviction that the good things of life—love, friendship, food, creature satisfactions of any sort—and the lusty spontaneous enjoyment thereof are not for him.

Unconsciously he feels like the skeleton at the feast, when proffered the more abundant life, hence his phobic concern about his looks—which seem to objectify his worst fears about himself. Hence also his phobic retreat from fellowship situations and gustatory—or other physical—pleasures.

These neurotic difficulties naturally would put him on the defensive in intimate relationship to you, a robust extrovert with a gourmet's appetite for love and friendship as well as food, I daresay. His gagging revulsion to food has generalized neurotic significance. It is a graphic, symbolic unconscious rejection of life itself.

Perhaps in lesser degree it also signifies rejection of you. Why? He may feel that you are tacitly pressing demands that he can't meet, social demands or amative demands that he has no stomach for.

For advice: He needs short-term analytical help in gaining insight into the tangled roots of his phobic anxieties, after which his own common sense should take over and devise remedies for easing the strain in personal relations.

Hints for the Homemaker

Knitted underwear should be pulled and stretched by hand, not ironed.

Iodine stains will come out of almost any article if soaked in lime water.

A small amount of gasoline in the water when scrubbing very dirty floors will do away with grease spots.

Never press a stained garment or it will make the stain permanent and impossible to remove without professional aid—if then.

Baking soda on a dampened cloth will remove all traces of scum and evaporation from fish aquariums, as well as act as a deodorant and sweetener. After the soda applications, rinse well and dry, then refill the bowl.

Novel Chin Lifters Will Tone Those Giveaway Throatlines

By Ida Jean Kain

Take three guesses . . . what is the shapeliest feature about a woman from a movie cameraman's angle? I'll bet a pair on the aisle you missed! It's the woman's chin. That's what the man said . . the chin.

According to Sol Polito, all other contours can be so treated by the camera as to add or subtract from physical outlines, but not the chin. Well, our expert ought to know, he's won enough Oscars for cinematography. He declares the chinline is one that nobdy can monkey with . . . and tells all.

Naturally he didn't mention a thing about age, since that word is never whispered in Hollywod. But yo uand I know full well that depends quite a bit on the tilt of the chin. Let it drop and the chinline goes downhill in a hurry. Carry your head squarely on your shoulders, chin level and the supporting muscles stay firmly on the job.

An actress, to get any place on the stage or in pictures, must have a beautiful head carriage. And it follows that she also has a beautiful throatline. She takes no chances on it slipping.

One exercise in high favor is to tip the chin in air, look toward the ceiling and blow. It's more fun to blow on a feather in the air. The trick is to see how long you can keep the feather aloft. Try for a full minute. The record is five minutes. It's a good breathing exercise too.

Here's one that's all wet, but you might like to try it. It's another of the kind that should be kept from the children so as not to give them ideas. Half fill your mouth with water, tip your head slightly back and slosh the water around, puff your cheeks in and out. This is guaranteed to be beautifying. It reaches the muscles of the cheeks, chin and throat.

Chewing is first-rate exercise for banishing a double chin, provided you're not chewing chocolates. The exercise is to tip your head back and chew like a bunny, pulling the lower jaw up firmly.

Finish by dashing cold, cold water over your throat and chin to tone the skin and superficial muscles.

Too, Too Many

A few green plants in the house gives a cheerful appearance, but don't take the most cheerful bay window in your home and crowd it full of tables and tabourets holding pot after pot of greens. Have one or two if you wish but leave room for a big comfortable chair in the sunny spots so people can enjoy your home, not just plants.

Cleaner Feet

Your feet have not been bathed just because you soak them in a tub along with the rest of you or stood under a shower and let the water flow over them. They need a good washing with soapsuds and a cloth or brush to really remove all the punishment they take in a day. You will feel less tired if you see that your feet are bathed regularly and well.

Women Voters Would Admit Fair Share of Displaced Persons

Support for legislation permitting the United States to admit its fair share of displaced persons has been renewed by the national board of the League of Women Voters at the close of its five-day meeting in Washington.

The board voted to urge the Senate and the House to give attention to this matter early in the year and to act favorably on it during the 80th Congress, Miss Anna Lord Strauss, president, announced. "Further delay on our part can be justified neither by moral, economic, or political grounds," she added.

Miss Strauss said the hope expressed by the League Board was that as a result of the European investigations made by Senators and Representatives during the summer and fall, an impetus will be given to early action on the Stratton bill and the bill introduced in the Senate by Senators Ferguson, Ball, Smith, Saltonstall, Bricker, Cooper, Hatch, McGrath, and Morse.

"The United States, as the wealthiest and most productive nation in the world, cannot dodge its responsibility in helping to solve this problem which casts a continuous shadow or hopes for peace" Miss Strauss said. "Efforts by international agencies or conferences can facilitate the orderly resettlement of these war victims; only through specific legislative action by our Congress will it be possible for the United States to cooperate in such efforts by opening its doors to a number commensurate with our world position."

Hadassah Will Meet for Lunch And Program

A thrift luncheon for the benefit of the Child Welfare Fund will precede the next meeting of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah at the Jewish Community Center tomorrow at noon.

Mrs. Aaron Gerber, chairman of the Child Welfare Committee, will preside at the meeting, which will begin at 1:15 p. m. A dramatic skit entitled "Hands" will be presented by the Brentwood Group of Hadassah under the direction of Mrs. Nathan Abramson, and there will be a roundtable discussion of the Hadassah convention recently held in Atlantic City.

Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization of America, through its child welfare program in Palestine, is trying to develop the youth of Palestine into healthy, well-educated, self-sufficient and resourceful adults. It supports 52 prenatal and infant welfare stations which treat Arabs as well as Jews; feeds 30,000 school children hot lunches each day; maintains a school hygiene service which provides free medical care for 100,000 children; operates 40 permanent playgrounds and 20 summer camps. Teen-age canteens have been established as a means of combating juvenile delinquency and are becoming meeting places for young Palestinians. As there is no compulsory educational system in Palestine, the playgrounds, camps, and canteens must of necessity combine fun with work, and a real effort is being made to establish the highest standards along American lines. Also, the facilities for secondary education are limited, and Hadassah maintains the Brandeis Vocational Center and the Alice Seligsberger School for Girls to give young men and women vocational training.

Mrs. Gerber has announced the appointment of Mrs. Harry Miller, 1304 Saratoga ave. ne., as cochairman of child welfare in charge of the movies to be held for the benefit of that fund. These will be all-comedy programs at the Apex, Sheridan, Kaywood and Atlantic Theaters on November 28, at 10:30 a. m. The price of admission will be 50 cents, plus 10 cents tax, and anyone interested in getting up a party of young friends for the movies may communicate with Mrs. Miller for further details.

Falls Church Council Eyes Water Plan

Falls Church Town Council tonight will discuss the possibility of connecting the town's water system to the Arlington pipeline at Chain Bridge instead of running a new main into Dalecarlia Reservoir.

The line to Dalecarlia Reservoir has been projected for several months to eliminate a water shortage resulting from new apartment and residential developments.

Army Engineers, a town official saidsaid last night, have plans for a new dam across the Potomac near Dalecarlia in about 1955 and a new 30-inch water main to supply Falls Church might be included in the plans, thus making an immediate Delecarlia connection possibly inadvisable.

Tapping the Arlington main at Chain Bridge, it was pointed out, might provide sufficient water for present needs and provide an emergency main after the dam is built and the new, larger main goes into use.

Plans, meanwhile, for establishment of a Fairfax County Sanitary District No. 3 to provide water for the McLean-Chesterbrook-Franklin Park areas have been prepared.

The $1,700,000 system would be self-liquidating over a period of 40 years and possibly 30 years if anticipated population growths are realized.

The proposed system would provide water and sewer facilities and would include four automatic pumping stations, a treatment plant and trunks for the sewage; a one-million-gallon storage reservoir near Lewinsville, a 250,000-gallon tank on Miners Hill Ridge and two pumping stations, one near Chesterbrook and the other near Lewinsville for the water system. Approximately 26.5 miles of pipe with 79 fire hydrants would be provided.

Sewer rates would be $2 per month and water would be sold at $2 for the first 3000 gallons each month plus 50 cents for each additional 1000 gallons.

'Wet Water' Tests Stop Fires Fast

Tests with "wet water" yesterday showed that fires can be extinguished with one third the liquid in one third the time that ordinary water requires. The compound is ordinary water treated with fire-smothering chemicals.

The tests were made at the Fire Service Extension College of Engineering athe University of Maryland. Hyattsville, Riverdale, College Park and Glen Echo Volunteer Fire Departments participated.

Shacks filled with excelsior, sawdust and baled hay were used for one set of tests, and pits in which kerosene, fuel oil, gasoline and benzol were set aflame for others. Stacked lumber was used in additional experiments.

The tests showed less smoke fesults when "wet water" is used, and a benzol fire which wasn't affected by ordinary water was extinguished in 13 seconds with 8 gallons of the treated water.

Chief J. W. Just, director of the fire extension service, said the tests were conducted to determine primarily whether the "wet water" was practical. He said some of the results were "amazing."

Some 100 firemen from nearby areas attended the tests.

Georgia Sothern Back at Gayety

By Richard L. Coe

GEORGIA SOTHERN, blond, snub-nosed and tightly cased in a sheath of silver spangles, steps up to the footlights at the Gayety.

"Hey," she screams, "where are all the bald heads?"

Yes, Georgia's back at the Gayety these days, shouting, bumping and throwing herself around. It's too bad there isn't a runway at the Gayety, for Georgia would be out there, too, tossing cigarettes (unlighted) at the lads and lassies who bunch up as close to the stage as they can get. Bald heads don't have a chance.

The pit orchestra plays the Gayety's theme song—"I Love You Truly"—and the traditional turns of sketches and dances get under way. This week Georgia's onstage six times daily, twice each performance.

Backstage Georgia offers a reporter a drink—straight from that familiar blue bottle labeled Bromo Seltzer.

"I guess that speaks for itself," laughs Georgia.

Georgia hasn't been in our town for sometime. She's been working in the highbrow legit and probably will go back to it soon for Mike Todd's coming musical with Milton Berle.

It was Mike who kept Georgia from getting one of the theater's juiciest roles in recent years. She bears him no grudge, "but I don't let him forget it."

It happened when Todd was producing Gypsy Rose Lee's play, "The Naked Genius." With Joan Blondell and Georgia in the top roles, rehearsals were about to begin. Georgia had an offer for another play. "But Mike told me I'd be a sap. There were only three parts in the thing and who ever heard of a three-character play getting a long run?

"So I stuck with 'The Naked Genius,' which lasted 20 weeks. The other play was 'The Voice of the Turtle.' That was four years ago and Olive Lashbrook is still a good part."

Georgia started off her theatrical exhibits as a kid in dramatic school. Now she'd like to find a home in California where "instead of going off gosh knows where for a vacation you can just sit in your own back yard and bask, bask, bask."

Looking back on her years with Bobby Clark in "Star and Garter," Georgia raves about the guy. "I saw him in Philadelphia just the other day and he told me to say hello to Washington. He'll be down in a couple of weeks, you know, in 'Sweethearts' at the National."

THE CAPITOL'S Gene Ford ought to drop into the Gayety before Billy Reed gets away. Billy, who's been around for years, has an act that might be a wow on F street—certainly a lot funnier than those Broadway hillbillies who come down with gags that begin "As I wuz coming to the theater this afternoon I" etc., etc., etc. The best part of Billy's act finds him at a restaurant table beating time with knives on dishes and glasses. Before the act's over dishes and glasses are in a million pieces. But it doesn't stop Billy from keeping up with the orchestra. It's a lot of fun and we've an idea the Capitol folks would lap it up. With his straight man, Jack Murray, Reed might have an act that the Capitol's family patrons would enjoy.

Negro Wears Turban, Feted In Alabama

New York, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—A Negro clergyman said today that a turban rented from a costume house served as a passport across "Jim Crow" lines and brought him a reception usually accorded only to visiting dignitaries" when he visited Alabama a few days ago.

The Rev. Jesse Weyman Routee, 39, of the Holy Trinity Lutheran Church of South Jamaica, N. Y., the son of a former Yale professor, said that with a turban on his head he ate in restaurants at Mobile, Ala., which had never served Negroes before.

The experience was in contrast, he said, to a trip to Alabama which he made in 1943 wearing no turban but his clerical collar.

"The first time I went to Mobile," he said, "I was insulted and pushed around by southern whites. This time I thought I'd try an experiment. I wore a turban and waited to see what would happen. It worked like magic."

Routee said no one ever asked if he were a Negro but he felt "like a paratrooper behind enemy lines."

Mobile civic, political and social leaders received him with courtesy, he said.

He said that in a leading Mobile restaurant he summoned the headwaiter and asked what would happen if a Negro came in to be served. The waiter told him, he said, that "no Negro would dare come in here to eat."

"I wasn't trying to fool anybody," Routee said. "I wanted to learn something."

He said that a police captain in Mobile told him there wasn't any Negro problem there because "if we have any trouble with a nigger we just knock him down."

He said, however, that he felt the South was making progress on the racial issue and that he could "feel a rising tide of better relationships."

Men's Clothing Union Gets 12½c Boost

New York, Nov. 16 (NYHT).—An agreement giving 150,000 men's clothing workers a 12½-cents-an-hour wage rise, effective December 15, and a second week's vacation with pay, was announced today by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and the Clothing Manufacturers Association of the United States of America. The agreement covers about 95 per cent of the workers in the industry.

Jacob S. Potofsky, Amalgamated president, said the union would not have pressed for a wage rise, which he described as "only a cost-of-living adjustment," if the abolition of the Office of Price Administration "had not resulted ni soaring prices in the past year."

Potofsky explained Election Day holiday demand was relinquished, along with other "fringe" demands, when the manufacturers' negotiators made it clear that to grant them would mean additional price rises in the cost of men's clothing.

Potofsky said the 12½-cents wage rise only compensated for the increase in the cost of living since the last rise won by the union in November, 1946, and did not represent any increase in feal wages. The second week's vacation, however, does represent a substantial gain, he said.

Potofsky estimated that the result of the newly won benefits would lead in "some" instances to price rises of 85 cents to -1.50 on men's suit. He emphosized that such rises would also reflect increased costs of woolen and lining materials.

In Alexandria

Hospital Board Eyes Survey Data

Directors of Alexandria Hospital meet tomorrow to consider results of a two-month survey of its management and rates.

The meeting was called by Board Chairman David C. Book following release of a 64-page preliminary report of the investigating committee. The report found fault with hospital management and operation and recommended upping the present $5 daily fee for charity patients to $8.81.

Copies of the report were also forwarded to Alexandria City Council, which has balked at proposals to increase charity fees and a hospital request for an outright grant of $30,000.

Gilbert and Sullivan's "Iolanthe" will be presented by the chancel choir of the Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring, at the Gaithersburg High School at 8:30 p. m. Saturday under the sponsorship of the Gaitthersburg Lions Club.

The company, and chorus of 35 voices, under the direction of Mrs. Dorothy Radde Emery, recently gave several performances in Silver Spring.

Covenants Condemned at Youth Forum

Restrictive covenants were condemned yesterday by a panel of three speakers in public discussion of the subject at the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA, 1719 13th st. nw.

The program, under auspices of the New World Forum, a coeducational pyouth committee of the branch YWCA, featured James A. Cobb, retired Municipal Court judge; Henry Beitscher, CIO's Washington Industrial Union Council chairman, and Byron Allen, civil rights committee chairman of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Judge Cobb branded community covenants "morally and legally wrong," terming them "a conspiracy against the highest law of the land."

Beitscher termed them "pure and simple profiteering" in which "prejudice is disguised to permit real estate interests to keep prices high while the community takes the rap." He called the Federation of Citizens' Associations "hypocritical" in its stand of justifying such covenants.

Allen concluded the discussion with a talk on the controversial problem, saying that the growing Negro population makes restrictive covenants unworkable.

Ex-Police Chief And Wife Slain In Ambush

Chicago, Nov. 16 (AP).—Shotgun charges blasted away the lives of a former suburban police chief and his wife early today within a few feet of their home in Posen and Chicago's southern outskirts.

The dead were Stanley Rzepa and his wife, Anna, both 31.

Rzepa had resigned as head of the Posen police department last month after he was fined $200 and costs in Criminal Court October 21 following his plea of guilt to charges of malfeasance and illegal sale of fireworks.

Car Seen Driving Away

Wilburn Kennedy, acting chief of the Illinois State police, said Rzepa and his wife were slain as they arrived home about 5:30 a. m. from Rzepa's tavern, the Green Villa, in Posen.

Rzepa was shot in the left side of the head and in the back. His wife, shot in the abdomen, died en route to Oak Forest Hospital.

Kennedy said that the Rzepas' two children, Anthony, 11, and Patricia, 9, and Rzepa's brother-in-law, Stanley Nazia, 28, were in the house at the time of the shooting. Nazia told police he heard two shots in rapid succession, a scream, then a third shot. He ran out of the front door in time to see an automobile, presumably the slayers', drive away.

Shotgun Shells Fired

Chief Kennedy said that six 12-gauge shotgun shells were found at the shooting scene, and examination of the ground showed that two shells had been discharged into the ground.

Rzepa was arrested last July on complaints charging he had sold fireworks. He was indicted later on malfeasance charges which accused him of extorting money from Posen tavern owners and making illegal fireworks sales.

Youths Sought On Charges of Murder, Rape

Richland Center, Wis., Nov. 16 (AP).—A University of Michigan coed has "positively identified" pictures of two youths sought in connection with the girl's story that she was raped and her brother-in-law slain by the pair, Sheriff Loren E. Marshill of Richland county said tonight.

Edwin Wilkie, Dane County district attorney, said personal papers of one of the youths sought were found in the car, abandoned in a ditch, and that the two had been named by William Harris, 27, of Richland Center, who saw the youths flee and took the girl to authorities. The car also contained some of the girl's clothing.

The coed, Janet Ann Rosenblatt, 19, of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, was quoted by Wilkie as saying her brother-in-law, Carl L. Carlson, 25, of Superior, Wis., was shot by one of the men after they had offered the victims a ride Friday night from Madison to Badger Village a University of Wisconsin housing center 35 miles northwest of Madison.

Wilkie said she told him that while Carlson lay dead on the floor of the car, both men raped her. Her story related that after a stop at Richland Center during which one of the men changed his clothes in a house there, they disposed of the body, one of them mentioned the nearby Blue River as a likely place to leave it.

Authorities continued to search for Carlson's body.

Miss Rosenblatt said she came to Madison Friday night to attend a football game. She said Carlson, a four-year Navy veteran, was a premedical student at the University of Wisconsin.

Md. Commission Denied Veterans Aid, Is Charge

Baltimore, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Maryland Veterans Commission, under investigation by the State Legislature, was charged yesterday with denying financial aid to a badly wounded veteran and to another veteran's widow, in need of an operation.

Adolph C. Winkler, sr., past State commander of the Disabled American Veterans, made the accusation at a hearing before the committee investigating the commisison's activities and expenditures.

Aid was asked for "a badly wounded veteran who was in desperate need because his payments from the Federal Government were temporarily held up," Winkler said. "He was denied assistance on the ground he was receiving assistance and did not need any."

Winkler said the commission ignored suggestions that it provide veterans groups with monthly activity reports and also assign commission service officer in the Veterans Administration offices.

COMMUTING FARM
11 MILES
FROM DISTRICT LINE
200 acres of crop land, 40 acres permanent pasture, 60 acres woods; in the center of the rich Collington loam area of Prince Georges County, famous for high-quality tobacco and general crops; a neighborhood of old Maryland estates; the house is a typical Maryland Georgian English basement Maryland farmhouse of solid brick covered with stucco, about 150 years old. It sits on a knoll overlooking the farm. There are nine rooms, six fireplaces, 13-foot ceilings, an extremely large entrance hall running through the house, plus two floored but unfinished attic rooms and two unfinished but above-grade basement rooms with fireplaces. The house is structurally sound and the original cornices, woodwork, and heart-pine floors are in excellent condition. It has electricity, telephone and water. Although it has been lived in continuously, it has never been restored and modernized, and it needs both. There are three small tenant houses occupied by available labor. Properties of such size in this fertile area so close to Washington seldom come on the market. It offers an opportunity as an unusually close-in commuting farm, or a farming estate, or a real estate investment so close to our growing Capital City. Price, $55,000. Owner, William Ingles, Tower Building, District 9807 or District 8268. Brokers' cooperation invited.

New Council Fight Stirs Alexandrians

The current attempt to reshape the Alexandria City Council is another indulgence of an old habit.

Four times in the last 28 years Alexandrians have gone to the polls at special elections to choose between a 16-man council or a 5-man council, a 7-man council or a 9-man council, elected at large or from the wards. Twice they have voted for a change.

Since 1932, the prevailing form has been a nine-man council, six members elected from wards and three at large.

Group Seeks Change

Petitions are now being circulated by a group desiring a change to a seven-man council elected at large, the alternative form provided in the city charter. If the petition signers equal 10 per cent of the qualified voters in May, 1946, they will force the fifth such election.

Supporters claim they already have 2000 names, about 500 more than they need. If and when the petition s presented to Circuit Court, Judge Paul E. Brown, State law requires him to order a special election within 90 days.

Alexandria has had a remarkably varied municipal history. It has been a town without a name, the county seat of Fairfax, a part of the District of Columbia, the county seat of Alexandria, and finally the City of Alexandria without affiliation in any county.

City in Two Sections

In 1963, it was designated the capital of that part of the State controlled by the Federal Government. For a period beginning in 1852, the city was divided into two sections, neither of which could benefit from taxes collected in the other.

The city first tried to adopt the present city manager and council form of government in 1919. The incumbent bicameral form of council and aldermen barely carried a special election, 610 to 594.

Two years later, however, the city manager system with a five-man council elected at large swept in with a vote of 1152 to 318.

This system continued in effect until 1932, when the General Assembly amended the city charter and gave the voters a choice between the forms now at issue.

Ward Plan Succeeds

The ward plan carried at another special election by a 2-to-1 majority, 1819 to 927. It may be significant that the strongest vote for the ward plan came from outlying and newly annexed districts.

On a second try in 1944, the at-large plan lost by an even stronger vote, 2662 to 1149.

Advocates of the at-large plan, which reappeared after council's appointment of Nicholas A. Colasanto as city manager, point out that ward councilmen must always keep uppermost in their minds the wants and needs peculiar to their own wards.

They claim that in such a situation the council often misses the forest for the trees—that council members approach problems with the welfare of their districts in mind rather than that of the city as a whole.

System Defended

Defenders of the ward system fear their sections may go unrepresented in an at-large council. This feeling seems to flourish particularly in newly developed outlying regions where much of the newly acquired population consists of Government workers.

Two members of the city council—Mayor William T. Wilkins and R. Samuel Luckett, both at-large members—have signed the petition. So has Joseph M. Pancoast, who served as temporary city manager until Saturday.

Since 1919 the at-large plan has lost in three out of four tests at the polls. But 2000 voters would be 60 per cent of the total vote turned out at the general election held two weeks ago.

May Opening Home-Town Law Office

By the United Press

Former Representative Andrew J. May, who has appealed his conviction on war fraud conspiracy charges, is opening a law office in his home town, Prestonsburg, Ky., it was disclosed yesterday.

Reports from Prestonburg said the 72-year-old former chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee is "looking better" than he has at any time since he was found guilty in District Court here of accepting $53,000 in bribes to influence contract awards for the Garsson munitions combine.

Prestonburg acquaintances said May is in "generally good shape" and is handling most of the details involved in setting up the new law firm.

May's battle to clear himself of the conspiracy conviction is scheduled to enter a new phase today when records of the lower court trial are filed with the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Counsel for May and his co-defendants, Dr. Henry and Murray Garsson, appealed the lower court verdict immediately after it was handed down. Today is the last day for filing of the records with the appeals court.

They then will have 25 days in which to file their briefs and arguments on the appeal and the Government will have an additional 25 days in which to file its reply.

May, who suffers from a heart ailment, was sentenced on July 25 to serve from eight months to two years in Federal prison. Pending their appeal, however, he and the two Garssons were released on $2500 bond each.

Farmers Told How to Save Costly Grain by Budgeting

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—Current high feed prices amount to as much as half of total production costs on many Virginia dairy farms, according to an Agricultural Extension Service specialist.

Extension Dairyman R. G. Connelly urged grain conservation and termed farmers fortunate who have an adequate supply of good quality roughage with much of the nutritive value commonly supplied in expensive grain feed.

To make efficient use of roughage in saving grain feed, Connelly recommended these measures:

Cull the herd and regulate grain feeding to insure that no expensive grain is wasted on low producers.

Budget roughage to insure that all milking cows receive at least a limited amount daily.

Feed silage three times daily to stimulate appetites.

Conserve grain feeding by providing a well balanced grain mixture strictly according to each cow's average rate of milk production.

Farmers can conserve grain and cut production costs by dosing inexpensive roughage with molasses to make it palatable to livestock, Connelly said. Molasses sprayed on rough and coarse feeds, he said, will materially increase their consumption by livestock.

Low in protein but high in carbohydrates, minerals, and some vitamins, beet and cane feeding molasses was described by Connelly as containing 70 to 75 per cent as much digestible nutrients per pound as corn.

At the same time, more attention to safe storage of corn was advanced as a means of aiding in the Nation's grain conservation program.

Associate Agricultural Engineer G. D. Kite of the Extension Service advised farmers that to facilitate corn drying by natural air circulation cribs should not exceed a width of 8 feet.

If cribs do exceed this width, he added, air ducts should be provided so that no corn is more than 4 feet from a flow of air.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Children Benefit From Sales At Thrift Shop

The annual sale of Christmas dolls will open Wednesday at the Thrift Shop, 809 9th st. nw.

Center of attraction will be a doll which was dressed at the White House, and contributed for the occasion by the First Lady.

Surrounding Mrs. Truman's doll will be the contributions of the ladies of the various embassies and legations. And of course there will also be a host of popularly priced dolls.

So everybody who is shopping for a present for a little girl is invited to see the special doll collection which the Thrift Shop will put on sale, starting Wednesday.

Incidentally, this might be a good time to remind you what the Thrift Shop is.

It was founded 19 years ago by Mrs. John Allan Dougherty. Its purpose was to turn "trash into cash" for the benefit of Washington's sick and handicapped children.

In the years that have passed, the "trash" has all but disappeared. Countless Washingtonians have contributed thousands of items of real value, and the Thrift Shop has sold these contributions at reasonable prices.

Proceeds have been turned over to Children's Hospital, the Children's Country Home, the Pre-Natal Clinic of Columbia Hospital, the Child Welfare Society, the Junior League and St. John's Orphanage.

That's why I suggested that you might like to do some of your shopping at the Thrift Shop. And if you can contribute anything which the shop might sell, call Metropolitan 1026 for pickup service—or bring your gift in person.

The children will appreciate your help.

HOT STOVE LEAGUE

Isn't this the time of year when we start seeing stories about the hard-hitting rookies who are being signed by the Nats?

NAGRAVATING ITEM

Mrs. Gay Faulkner of 2823 Minnesota ave. se. has been amusing herself for the past few years by coining new words.

For example, when Hess flew to England during the war, his journey immediately became a "Hesscapade." Among her other novel definitions are:

Improperganda: Subversive stuff.

Weducated: Educated for marriage.

Nagravating: What some wives are.

Mrs. Faulkner suggests that other District Liners might like to coin a few words and join the fun.

But if you do, please help me find an appropriate name for the game. We can't use "Daffynitions," because somebody else thought of it first.

NICE WORK— AND THEY HAVE IT

Hospitalized veterans at Walter Reed have taken on the kind of assignment they love.

They're going to serve as talent scouts, to select the Greater Washington girl "most likely to to succeed in a career as a model."

After pondering over the pictures of the various applicants, the boys will select the 25 they like best.

These finalists will appear in person in the Red Cross Auditorium on December 4 for final judging, and the girl who gets the most applause will be declared the winner. She'll be given a free course in modeling by a local school.

Girls between the ages of 17 and 25 who wish to enter the contest may do so until November 28 by sending their photographs and measurements to Wac Capt. Jean Alexander, Public Relations Office, Walter Reed Hospital.

HOW APPROPRIATE

Last Christmas Eve, Richard Lahey, director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art School, painted a water color which he titled "Quiet Evening at Home."

ADD SIGNS

"Helen" thinks one of the funniest signs she's seen here is the one in a hamburger joint on 17th st. nw. It says:

"Please do not hesitate to ask us to cash a check. Our refusal will be courteous."

The most puzzling sign of recent weeks has been turned up by Leonard R. Ansell of 1425 Fort Stevens dr. nw. In a 14th st. gift store he saw:

"Antiques for Tomorrow."

Jerry Burns of 1704 B st. se. turns up an oldie which nobody else has submitted yet. Over the soft-drink counter of a local drug store is the legend:

"Don't worry, Mom—we have Pop on ice."

Thelma P. Murto of 419 Oglethorpe st. nw. turns in a dandy, which she says originated in Honolulu. A dairy out there used milk bottles which bore the motto:

"Our cows are never contented. They are always striving to do better."

FORGOTTEN MAN

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Dorothy Caruso, the widow of Enrico Caruso, is writing a second book. Her first was "Enrico Caruso: His Life and Death." Her principal interest, however, is her 3-year-old grandson. A few days ago, when Mrs. Caruso presented a busts of her late husband to Edward Johnson, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera, she told her grandson and reported: "He's only 3 years old, and the other day I heard him do an aria" . . . "An aria?" gasped Mr. Johnson. "Which aria?" . . . "The boy," said Mrs. Caruso, "did 'Three Blind Mice.'"

Ann Sheridan visited the Warner Bros. dressing room of Pat O'Brien. It adjoins the suite Warners once had provided for Kay Francis, the star whose departure from the studio was an angry one. Jack Warner had suggested, when Miss Francis' contract expired, that inasmuch as the studio paid her so much money, it would be nice if she'd agree to work in one picture without salary . . .

Miss Sheridan studied O'Brien's dressing room, and noticed that the pictures on the wall were askew. "What happened?" she asked O'Brien, who pointed to the suite next door and explained: "Honey, the pictures on my walls haven't been straight since the day Warner asked Kay to work for nothing."

Ruth Chatterson, escorted by Harold J. Kennedy, the actor-playright-lecturer, visited the Stork Club. Miss Chatterton saw Ann Sheridan there, and asked to meet her. She felt they somehow were related, because each had been the wife of George Brent.

Kennedy had an American Airlines reservtion on a 5 a. m. plane to Pittsburgh, to deliver a lecture. He phoned the reservation office to confirm his passage. "You'll have to pick up the ticket by 4 a. m." he was told . . . "But I can't," Kennedy protested. "I can't leave here. I'm in the Stork Club, with Ann Sheridan and Ruth Chatterton" . . . "In that case," said the American Airlines official, "sit tight—we'll bring the ticket to you."

Raphael Hakim, the producer whose first film, "Her Husband's Affairs," was selected by Frank Sinatra as the one with which he'll make his appearance at the Capitol Theater, received notice that the picture has been banned by a British theater chain. Hakim refused to accede to the request that Co-Author Ben Hecht's name be removed from the billing in Britain, where Hecht's writings on Palestine have made him a public enemy.

The friendship between Koussevitzky and Shostakovitch is no more, because the conductor's invitation to the composer to visit Boston was answered by the Soviet Music Commissar and not by Shostakovitch.

West's Governors Open-Minded

By Drew Pearson

Aboard the Friendship Train.—One thing I've noticed about governors in the Western part of the U. S. A. is that they pretty much forget about who's a Democrat and who's a Republican. Gov. Earl Warren of California, for instance, seems to be on intimate terms with Gov. Vail Pittman of Nevada, though one is a Republican, the other a Democrat. And all the Democratic governors in the West swear by Warren, though he's a Republican.

Perhaps this is because they're more broad-gauged and open-minded in the West. Or perhaps it's because the Western governors have to gang up on the Eastern penny-pinchers in Congress who want to cut off their reclamation money. Anyway, here are some quick appraisals I made of fellow passengers:

Pittman of Nevada

Pittman

Pittman was a miner, lumber dealer, and jack-of-all-trades in the early Tonopah days, finally settling down to newspaper publishing at Ely . . . Mrs. Pittman helps run the paper . . . Pittman governs the sixth largest State in the Union, with the least population, but he knows every corner of it. When it came to loading food for the Friendship Train, he collected truckloads from all parts of the State—even 700 miles from the train's scheduled route, in Las Vegas . . . For many years, Pittman took a back seat in State politics, while his elder brother, Key, served as United States Senator from Nevada. But on Key's death, brother Vail scared the daylights out of Senator Pat McCarran by almost defeating him in the Democratic primary. In fact, if it hadn't been for some peculiar last-minute voting by easily influenced Negro war workers at Las Vegas, Pittman might have won . . . The effect on McCarran, however, has been healthy. Since then he has paid more attention to his knitting. Chances are Governor Pittman will be the next Senator from Nevada.

Maw of Utah

Governor Maw, Mormon governor of a Mormon State, has the undying opposition of the heads of his own church. Reuben Clark, once a liberal Under secretary of State and the man who changed the Monroe Doctrine into a cooperative, good-neighbor enterprise, has now gone back to Utah to run the Mormon church and, if possible, run Governor Maw out of politics . . . So far, he hasn't succeeded . . . Governor Maw is open-faced, slow-speaking, but talks to the point. He is of Scandinavian descent. Beginning life as a school teacher, he has taught at Northwestern University and at University of Utah, where he later served as dean of men . . . Twice he has been elected Governor of Utah, and despite the opposition of Mormon Church dignitaries (Maw himself is on the Sunday school board of the church) he probably will be elected again.

Maw

Hunt of Wyoming

Governor Hunt is the only Governor in United States history who is a dentist. Hunt came out to Wyoming through the baseball leagues. Born in Atlanta, Ill., he became a star on the high school ball team at a time when some of the small towns of Wyoming were baseball crazy. The town of Lander enticed him from Illinois to Wyoming, and he has been living there more or less ever since. In a State dominated by big cattle and sheep men who out-Republican the Republican Party, Hunt, a Democrat, has been elected anyway . . . In 1946 he was one of the few Democratic governors to weather the GOP landslide. So certain were the cattlemen that Hunt would be defeated that they invited him to their annual convention with the proviso, "If you are reelected." The governor was reelected, but had the pleasure of snubbing the cattlemen's dinner . . . What swung a lot of votes in Wyoming was the fact that millionaire Republicans in the East had sent campaign money into the State. Hunt called the roll of Republican contributions in 1942—Estelle Pew, $500; J. Howard Pew, $500; Mable Pew Martin, $500; Joe Pew, $500—all from Pennsylvania, all from the big Sun Oil family which bosses the GOP in Pennsylvania . . .

Wyoming's voters decided that they didn't want their State run by distant Pennsylvania.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

OHIO . . . the buckeye state

Ohio is known best as the "State of Presidents." She gave to the Nation General Ulysses S. Grant . . . Rutherford B. Hayes . . . James A. Garfield . . . Benjamin Harrison . . . William McKinley . . . William Howard Taft . . . and Warren G. Harding. The roster of Ohio's sons and daughters who are renowned for their achievements in the fields of curture, science and government is a long and distinguished one. Their contributions to the advancement of our society began early in the 19th Century and continue to the present day. A Cincinnati school of painters originated around 1840 . . . with Frank Duveneck, Robert Henri and George Bellows outstanding Ohio artists. Hiram Powers and John Quincy Adams Ward, internationlly known sculptors, are also Ohioans. The State has been the home of many authors and poets . . . Alice and Phoebe Cary . . . William Dean Howells . . . Ambrose Bierce . . . O. O. McIntyre, great American newspaperman . . . and O. Henry (William Sidney Porter), master of the short story. Louis Bromfield, contemporary novelist, makes his home on an Ohio farm; playwright Sherwood Anderson hails from Ohio. Thomas Alva Edison, foremost American inventive genius, was born and bred in the Buckeye State. The Hecht Company is both proud and happy to pay this tribute to the sons and daughters of the Buckeye State who are our friends and neighbors here in the Nation's Capital.

● OHIO . . . "An Empire Within an Empire" . . . is acclaimed for her achievements in industry . . . agriculture . . . and mining . . . and for her cultural and educational attainments. Perhaps Ohio's greatest distinction is that she is the birthplace of many great authors, musicians, artists and scientists . . . and the Mother of Presidents. Ohio is called the Buckeye State in honor of the native horse chestnut tree . . . popularly known as the Buckeye.

● OHIO . . . An industrial dynamo . . . ranks fourth in the Nation in manufacturing. Cleveland is the World's biggest handler of iron ore . . . Toledo, the largest coal shipping point in the World . . . and the second largest port in Lake Erie tonnage. Akron, the rubber manufacturing center of the world, is equipped to produce more than 125,000 tires a day . . . this one city consumes nearly 40 per cent of the crude rubber production of the entire world. Ohio's vast and varied factory output also includes wire, nails, nuts and bolts . . . in which it ranks first in the country . . . in addition to tools, paper, cash registers, railroad cars, shoes, glass and heavy steel products.

● OHIO . . . Where agriculture is another big industry. The State is first in the United States in soy bean production . . . sixth in corn and wheat . . . fifth in egg production . . . high in grapes and tobacco . . . and has a thriving dairy and livestock business. Ohio's fertile acres also give up a rich yield of minerals. She is first in lime and limestone . . . fifth in coal . . . fourth in sand and gravel . . . and high in oil and clay products.

● OHIO . . . An educational center . . . with institutions of higher learning readily accessible to all its citizens . . . ranks among the first three States in the Union in the number of colleges and universities. Oberlin College was the first in the world to admit women on equal terms with men. Ohio is also famed for its fine library system . . . seven years after the first settlement at Marietta a library was opened at Belpre. The Coonskin Library of Athens County was distributing books by horseback as early as 1803 . . . the forerunner of the Bookmobiles which today operate extensively throughout rural Ohio.

● OHIO . . . Whose Music Festival, started in 1873, with the Cincinnati Music Hall its home, early achieved national recognition. The Cleveland Symphony Orchestra is Ohio's outstanding musical group today. Ohioans, also much interested in the dramatic arts, participate actively in their many community theatres.

● OHIO . . . Whose diversified interests extend to sports . . . is home of the Cincinnati Reds and the Cleveland Indians, baseball teams . . . and the championship football team, the Cleveland Browns. Cleveland is the scene of the annual National Air Races each Labor Day week-end. The beaches along Lake Erie are favorite vacation spots.

● OHIO . . . Western frontier of the original colonies. Ohioans evince great interest in their historical background . . . and have established a multitude of museums and memorials commemorating their outstanding people and historical events.
